FACE it!

Take a walk on the beach and try to find two identical shells or grains of sand . . . you can't do it, can you? Now try to find two identical faces in a crowd . . . you surely can't do that, because no two faces are ever the same. There is a diversity among us all, not only in appearance, but also in personality. These different personalities range from quiet and reserved to outgoing and vivacious. Contrasts such as these provide the variety and excitement that inspire individuality in all of us. We don't feel we have to conform or model ourselves according to someone else's standards.

This freedom allows us to express our own individual characters in any way we choose. While some people settle for remaining "just another face in the crowd," we at Chamberlain strive for unparalleled excellence. We know that settling for second best would not satisfy our commitment to achieve even our most challenging goals. Dedicating ourselves to being the best that we can be is not merely a lofty ideal, we consciously devote our time and efforts to making this philosophy a reality.

Exuberant fans of all shapes and sizes gathered at the first-ever War Party to inspire the football team to "crush" our arch-rival, the Gaither Cowboys.

There's

NOTHING

Like US!

FACE it!

What makes us different from everyone else? Is it the car we drive or the clothes we wear? No, it's the things we do. Material possessions do not form the basis of our success. We attain this success through our eager participation in various activities. As a result of our dedication to and determination in everything we are involved in, we earn innumerable honors and distinctions. Whether we're mastering the technique of the perfect double back flip, rehearsing that seemingly impossible synchopated rhythm, or pulling an "all-nighter" for that Trigonometry test that counts as one-third of the nine week grade, we always do our best and manage to come out on top.

Rather than give up when faced with a challenging situation, we draw on the support of our faculty and fellow students to help us realize our potential. This support is evident in the cooperation and communication found on the playing field, in the classroom, and in all other aspects of student life. The combination of individual achievement and widespread support is the key to upholding our tradition of honor.

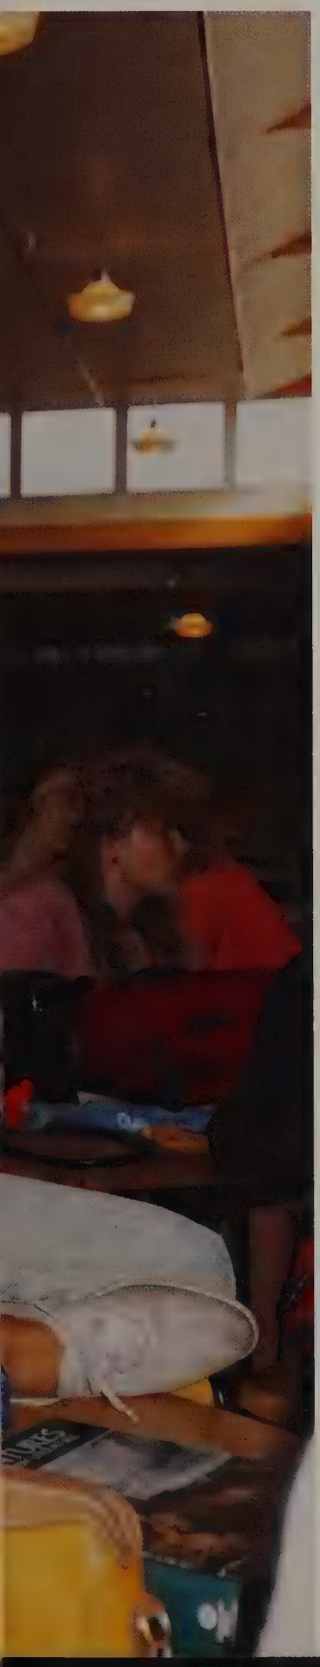
Organizations Define Priorities



Webster defines club as a "select number of persons in the habit of meeting for some common purpose." "A group of tightly-knit students under the guidance of a capable sponsor working together to serve the school and community" is Chamberlain's definition of club. We have taken Webster's definition and modified it to produce a more personal statement.

Since our clubs and organizations vary in title, honors, interest, and service-they may appear to be dissimilar. Upon closer inspection, however, one finds that they have much more in common. Each organization, in its own way, works toward the betterment of the school and community. A club's first priority is to provide. This responsibility is fulfilled in various ways: performing, helping the needy, and promoting interest in specific areas. Perhaps the most significant result of club participation, however, is the fostering of interaction and cooperation among peers.

CHEERLEADERS CAPTIVATE

Squad Unity Leads to Success

"C - H - S! C - H - S! C - H - S!" Various chants echoed throughout the stadium as the cheerleaders worked to fire-up the crowd. Performing cheers and pep dances, the cheerleaders played an important role in sparking school spirit.

Having only five senior members, the squad overcame inexperience with practice. Three days a week for two hours they practiced cheers, chants, dances, and partner stunts. Captain Michele Cimino and co-captains Kim Brown and Ronda Mercer led the squad to seize the "Grand Champion Award," first place in the dance competition, "Over-all Excellence Award," and the "110% Award" during summer camp at FSU. "I think we owe our success to hard work, a postive mental attitude, and squad unity," said Michele Cimino.

This was the first time a squad had a chance to compete at the National Cheerleading Competition since the opening of the school. However, the squad was unable to compete at this level due to safety reasons. Because of the number of injuries, the school board decided to ban pyramids. With the attitude of "that's the breaks," the squad moved toward future goals such as promoting school spirit and student involvement. To raise money along with spirit, the cheerleaders continued the tradition of selling spirit ribbons on game days. During pep rallies and games, the crowd created human waves as the cheerleaders chanted "Catch the wave, that C-H-S wave!" Service clubs performed skits or dances in the pep rallies to fire-up the fans. "It's great when the students are involved because it creates a more unified school spirit," commented Kim Brown.

CHIEFETTES REACH THE TOP

Squad follows tradition of excellence

Long practices, summer camp, and challenging dance routines were all components of the Chiefette squad. After tryouts, the twenty-three girls practiced throughout the summer months before school began. Near the end of the summer, their hard work was rewarded when they attended the University of Florida Drill Camp. At the camp, the squad members danced their way to the top and took awards for the best home routine and the best camp routine. Outstanding individual talent was rewarded as three of the squad members were nominated for the Miss All-American Drill Team.

With the start of the school year, the squad performed under the new direction of Mr. George Farmer. Under his leadership, the squad members were expected to keep their tradition of excellence by performing with precision and perfection. He explained that he "wouldn't have them be second class. Their talents and abilities require them to be awesome."

Once the football season started, the squad members performed in and out of school. They promoted school spirit as they danced for the student body in pep rallies. Captain Wendy Nelson and co-captain Wendy McCurdy led the group on the field as they performed halftime routines with the band at football games. Their direction continued throughout the year as the squad participated in marching band competition and competed in dance contests for band auxiliary. The Chiefettes represented the school when they marched with the band in parades all over the state, including the Strawberry Festival Parade in Plant City and the Edison Pageant of Lights Parade in Fort Myers.

WAVES OF SPIRIT

Enthusiasm and Energy Evident

What was dramatically different about Flag Corps and Twirlers besides their ever-increasing smiles and enthusiasm? For one, there was only a single Twirler, Sinda DeMoss, known as the Feature Twirler. "I was the only twirler," commented Sinda, "so I had to make up the routines myself, which meant extra hours of practice." Secondly Flag Corps had a new sponsor, Mr. George Farmer, who left Robinson High School for the opportunity to teach at Chamberlain.

Mr. Farmer worked well with the girls, who participated in the Edison Pageant of Light, the Gasparilla Parade, the Strawberry Festival, and the Veterans Day Parade. The highlight of the season came on November 21 when the annual Band Contest was held. Performing well at Contest was the chief goal for the Flag Corps and Feature Twirler, and many grueling hours of practice were put in by the girls. Captain Elena Mook and Co-Captain Stephanie Sawyer agreed that the performers worked hard and strove to excel at Contest.

Performing their best at half-time for our football fans was also a major concern of the girls. In order to look their best, Flag Corps held fund-raisers so that they could purchase new flags and poles. Since 1979, when they began performing at games, they have been spinning their batons and waving their flags to entertain the fans and cheer the Chiefs on to victory. Their bright smiles and sparkling green and gold uniforms lit up the half-time show for the loyal Chief fans. "I'm extremely proud of the Flag Corps and the Feature Twirler," says Mr. Farmer, "They are a credit to the School - we are the Show Band of Hillsborough County."

UNDER NEW DIRECTOR

Band Maintains Superior Image

"My goal this year is to reclaim the superior image that the band has maintained over the past thirty-one years," stated first-year sponsor Mr. George Farmer. Aiming to make the music discipline fun as well as a challenge, he wanted every member to learn something new each day and have fun learning it. He reached his goals as marching band membership nearly doubled. When asked why she participated in band, senior Patti Husbands replied, "The band seemed more fun and more active with Mr. Farmer as director. He was really enthusiastic and wanted to make the band the best it had ever been."

More parades and competitions were added to the band's schedule of events. As a result of many practices, including Monday and Wednesday nights, members were invited to participate in the Gasparilla Day and Night Parades, the Veteran's Day Parade, and the Strawberry Festival Parade.. Also, the marching band was chosen as the host band for the annual FBA marching competiton held in November. Besides competing in contests and parades, the band also had a chance to relax while performing in front of their friends at the War Party, at pep rallies, and at all football games.

With the help of several fundraisers throughout the year such as the Annual Band Barbeque before the Homecoming game and cheese and sausage sales, the marching band was able to raise enough money to travel in the spring to Ft. Meyers for the Pageant of Light Festival - a nation-wide competition. The marching band participated in field show and parade formation categories hoping to win a cash prize and add to their already superior image.

Z, ICC LEAD THE WAY

Dedicated to Service and Leadership

Z Club and ICC work in different ways to achieve the same goal. The goals of both these clubs was to create friendships and provide the school and community with service and volunteer work. "Multifaceted" — Michelle Gonzalez, president of Z Club, used this one word when asked to describe the members, whose wide variety of interests form a basis for the strong friendships formed. In order to involve this club with the school, Z Club sold carnations at Christmas time. Involvement in the community consisted of singing Christmas carols in convalescent homes and helping out at the Special Olympics. Vice-president Terri Oster remarked that "Helping out with Special Olympics was an unforgettable experience. I felt a sense of fulfillment when I saw the smiles on their faces which showed their appreciation of our support."

Volunteering its service to the school, Inter Club Council, better known as ICC, is a group of club presidents who worked together to decide what was in the best interest of the student body. ICC joined the leaders of each club so that the service and interest clubs could be aware of what one another was doing. Involvement in ICC was also an opportunity for the club leaders to voice their concerns to one another and to Mr. Gatlin. One of the duties of ICC was organizing War Party. Though ICC had no budget or fund-raisers, it played an important role in student life. Mrs. Emma Mosteller, who has sponsored ICC for the past five years, stated, "ICC is the group that ties the clubs together and gives them uniformity." The services of these clubs provided the school with organized activities that allowed student involvement in the community.

KEYING IN ON SUCCESS

Club Goal: To Be Above the Best

They had the reputation of being the best, ut could they do it again? The Kiwanettes nd Key Club each had the reputation for ontributing to the school and the communi-. The challenge facing these clubs was to ontinue the reputable tradition of service.

Originating from the Kiwanis Club Interna-onal, the Kiwanettes have been voted the umber one service club in the school as de-ermined by the administration for the past hree years. The motivational force behind he club was a determination to be the best gain. They displayed their efforts by hosting he "War Dance" after the rivalry football ame against Gaither. They continued their ervice to the community by visiting the buse-children's home, bringing gifts and miles, and by giving hugs to all the competi-ors in the Special Olympics. In October, the Kiwanettes added their own kind of school spirit to the War Party by participating in a dance with their co-service club, the Key Club.

The Key Club began the year by obtaining a new sponsor, Mr. David Kent. After an unstable previous year, new beginnings paved the way to a strong successful year. President Kenny Suarez and all club members determined that their activities and fund raisers would be organized to finance the school with the appropriate funds to complete fencing and renovations in the baseball field.

Senior club members and new inductees all added enough support to the clubs to enable them to meet their goals while simultaneously creating an enthusiastic social atmosphere. Club Sponsor, Mrs. Mary Young said, "If we help people and have fun while we're doing it, then I consider the year a success. Once again these clubs upheld tradition."

New Energy From New Sponsors

Jr. Civitan and Civinettes got off to fresh starts both in and out of school. The clubs took on a new attitude and perspective and got their acts together with new energy brought in by new sponsors.

Miss Jennifer Kirkland took the leading role as sponsor of Jr. Civitan. Members of the club, under the new leadership, took pride in their attitude of responsibility and service to the community. Jr. Civitan became affiliated with North Tampa Civitan and the officers attended officers training in Orlando. Jr. Civitan showed their school spirit by participating in the War Party and the talent show. Members also sold chief boxer shorts to help raise school spirit and with the money they earned, the club bought school supplies and Christmas treats for the children of the children's home.

With new sponsor Miss Megan Wheeler at the helm, the Civinettes focused on a sense of belonging and friendship. The club's annual fund-raiser, the balloon sale, raised funds, as well as spread nice thoughts to students and teachers. Rather than the traditional jersey, the members of Civinettes set a precedent by using T-shirts sporting the Civinette logo. The school spirit of Civinettes was displayed by the spirit banner that the club made for homecoming. In addition to their school involvement, the members of Civinettes served the community by helping with the Special Olympics. Member Suzy Priest stated, "We don't just serve the community; we have fun doing it."

DEVELOPING LEADERSHIP

Jr. Exchange and Exchangettes produce success

The opportunities seemed endless. Jr. Exhange and Exchangettes started off the year ith a packed schedule of events to help etter the school and community. In doing so, fficers and members learned the price of adership and its rewards.

Jr. Exchange expanded their social efforts lending a hand to some of the other clubs school. Ushering special programs and elping with school-wide fund raisers were tempts to help bring unity to all the organitions. Outside school, Jr. Exchange particiated in visiting local convalescent homes, aring their vitality with the elderly. Comenting on the successful year, President hanse Jones expressed his thoughts as "Jr. xchange established itself as a group of real aders in Chamberlain."

Exchangettes, led by President Suzanne Hooker, showed that friendship, a "key factor in their organization", led to very gratifying experiences. The officers, gaining important leadership skills, scheduled the Exchangettes' annual Halloween visit to a local children's home. Also, the canned food drive held in November was contributed to families in need at Thanksgiving. Participating in the 1988 Special Olympics, Exchangettes were also able to show how much they care for their community.

The rewards for such an active year were best shown at the End of the Year Picnic held at Lettuce Lake Park. With the Key and Kiwanettes, Jr. Exchange and Exchangettes held the gathering in honor of their successful year. The picnic enabled the clubs to show that friendship grows through helping others.

ANCHOR AND OPTIMISS SHINE

Their dedication is a notch above the norm

Dedicated to helping both their peers and ne community, Anchor and Optimiss mem-ers put forth their time and effort to com-leting this task. Their sponsors Mrs. Gina evrier and Mrs. Gayle Lincoln worked with heir clubs to offer support and assistance in ny way possible.

Selling balloons for homecoming and par-icipating in the War Party were only some of he ways in which Anchor members demon-trated their school support. In an attempt to ncrease students' overall academic perfor-nance; they volunteered their tutoring ser-ices to those pupils who could benefit from . By donating their time, everyone involved rew socially and intellectually.

Optimiss members are dedicated to work-ng with the mentally handicapped and the earing impaired by participating in Special Olympics. In December they gave a Christ-mas party for the children at a local orphan-age. In order to raise money to support their numerous projects, members sponsored car washes and sold prom accessories. The prof-its from these fundraisers went toward dona-tions to handicapped children such as the hearing impaired.

Above all, Optimiss and Anchor members were motivated by the need to help others. The general attitude was that the time spent was far less than the growth gained. Their participation in the community exemplified constant devotion. Optimiss treasurer Brenna Fender captured the spirit, saying "We find that working with handicapped children is very satisfying, seeing their smiling faces light up makes it all worth while."

Mrs. Gayle Lincoln, Optimiss sponsor, supports her club in all their endeavors.

TOTEM FACES CHANGES

A larger staff means better coverage

Face It! This year's Totem staff is "full of enthusiasm", remarked co-editor Melissa Campbell who also stated that, "Our new sponsor, Miss Kathy Sweeney, has brought good ideas and some positive changes in organization."

With a staff enlarged from 27 to 33 members, there were extra people that devoted all their time to photography, resulting in better coverage of the year's activities. Although each staffer was assigned his own job, the large group displayed their ability to work together at the Delmar Yearbook convention in North Carolina in August. The staff worked as a unit, whether they were brainstorming for ideas, or giving each other encouragement and support. As a result, the staff placed third overall in the design and layout contest.

Although working on the yearbook staff was hard work and time consuming, it did have its rewards. A senior staffer, Pam Kleban stated, "Even though I have a difficult schedule my senior year, I've always wanted to help make the yearbook. By working on staff, the yearbook will always be a special reminder of my high school years."

Of the 33 members, less than half were second-year staffers. However, the large number of first-year staffers did not serve as a disadvantage. They were quick learners and brought enthusiasm to the staff. The second-year staffers only had to help them through the first couple of deadlines before they caught on and were doing well on their own. As Miss Sweeney said, " The second-year staffers assumed a leadership role . . . I think the staff worked really well together."

MAKING HEADLINES

News Challenges Chieftain

"Anything goes" was Chieftain's motto, and was reflected in their eight editions published. With the increase of the staff by ten new members and the return of another ten members, Chieftain was able to deliver an issue on the first day of school and a new issue each nine weeks. The focus of Chieftain was not on fundraising and contests but on improving the paper itself. This new outlook helped Chieftain to win third place in "On the Spot" layout in August at the Florida Scholastic Press Association Conference in Tallahassee. Hard work did not intimidate Chieftain staffers, whether it was obtaining ads for publication or preparing paper for press. As one Chieftain staffer Mike Kenny states, "The experience I've gained will help me in college and it will give me a feel for different career possibilities."

Chieftain's new sponsor Ms. Hoagland faced many obstacles in publishing the school's newspaper. Among these problems were paying for publication costs and trying to cover a large and diverse student body. To meet publication costs Chieftain staffers had to go the extra mile to sell spots for advertisements to local businesses. In order to cover the large student body and write good news stories, staffers interviewed and photographed students participating in many activities. Photography was an important element in portraying student life and as stated by Chieftain photographer Mike Kologi, "Photography can be a lot of fun — I can express things like school spirit in my pictures more vividly than in words." Words were no problem however to veteran staffers and Chieftain was able to contribute much in their issues to students.

WORTHY TO BE HONORED

Beta, Quill and Scroll receive recognition

Straight A's! This achievement is not uncommon among honor club members. The hard work it took for students to make good grades was recognized by Beta and Quill and Scroll.

"It's a great way for the hardworking students to come together and be recognized for their academic talents," said Patti Szasz of Beta Club. Club sponsor, Mrs. Betty Watson, said the motivating force of the members was to achieve academic excellence. Acceptance into Beta required a 3.8 grade average. Questions were raised as to whether requirements would be toughened in the future. According to Mrs. Watson, Beta Club members would need a 3.8 grade average without the help of honors points. Member Greg Young felt that being able to be included in Beta "makes all the hard work worthwhile."

Another honor club is Quill and Scroll. This club consisted of second year Totem and Chieftain staffers. Co-sponsor, Mrs. Patty Hoagland, said the purpose of Quill and Scroll was to honor journalism students and foster prestige among school publications. It is not easy to stay on the Totem or Chieftain for a second year. As expressed by Tammy Perry, "The first year on Totem was really demanding. It's easy to get discouraged because of all the time and hard work that goes into being on staff." This makes being a member of Quill and Scroll quite an honor.

The honor clubs Quill and Scroll and Beta provide recognition for students willing to put in some extra effort to make good grades. Greg Young expressed his opinion of the clubs when he said, "It's great having clubs like Quill and Scroll and Beta. I think they are honors well deserved."

DOING IT WITH STYLE

FHS and SNHS Mix Work With Play

When you walked into the meeting you probably thought you were in the wrong room. Surely, people who have a 3.5 GPA in their foreign language and a 3.2 overall do not know about fun and relaxation, but only about books and schoolwork. That wasn't the case though for French Honor Society (FHS) and Spanish National Honor Society (SNHS). The students who made up these two honor clubs really knew how to mix fun, friendship, and learning together. FHS, with sponsor Ms. Vivianne Scott, helped their members understanding of the culture and language by attending the play L'Avare (The Miser). The play alternated from French to English so as not to leave anyone completely lost. They also planned a trip to the French Pavillion at Walt Disney's Epcot Center. Many of the members hosted a French foreign exchange student for a short while. SNHS, with sponsor Mrs. Juanita Yanes, enjoyed themselves by learning authentic Spanish dances such as the Jarabe Tapatio (The Mexican Hat Dance), songs, and cheers for the football games. They also prepared for their annual spring competition, Spanish Declamation, where they performed skits in Spanish, and also recited poems in Spanish, before a panel of judges.

French Honor Society and Spanish National Honor Society proved to everyone that participating in an Honors club meant laughs, fun and friendship. They also learned it meant hard work, dedication, and learning more about a foreign language. But both clubs shared the thought that the experience is definitely worth it.

ADDED DIMENSIONS

Common Interests Spark New Beginnings

This year the newly founded Social Studies Club was added to the list of interest clubs, and leading the way was the firmly established Science Club.

The Science Club has always provided an outlet for students who shared similar interests in all fields of science. Many club members were active participants in both the Science Fair and the Science Olympics. The Science Club benefited these students by allowing them time, resources, and guidance which enabled them to go on and compete at higher levels. Some of these students were also affiliated with the student-assistant research program that granted them to work and observe directly with lab researchers. Working to meet the students' interest, Sponsor Susan O'Brien and President Jean Kim set up field trips to the Laser Show and visits to the Cancer Research Center Labs at USF for the Club.

This year also marked the rebirth of the Social Studies Club. Sponsor Mr. Frank Laundy initiated the club's revival in order to provide a strong unit of students to compete and place well in the Brain Bowl Competitions. These competitions permitted students to compete against other district schools in fields ranging from political science and current events to European History and Psychology. Students revised the old constitution and a strong show of support was reflected in the initial club meetings at which the following officers were elected: Wendy Perry (President), Huyen Nguyen (Vice-President), Monique Chen (Secretary), and Benjie Sun (Treasurer). Mr. Laundy, pleased with the new beginnings said, "I think with the officers and the impressive show of support by the students, the club will fly. I foresee this group making an excellent standing in the competi- ...ead."

KEEPING SPIRIT ALIVE

Student Government, Spirits Soared

"Green and gold spirit; that was student government's focus for the year," exclaimed president Amy Feir. Many new activities were planned to promote school unity. Instead of the traditional Powwow, Student Council came up with the idea for a War Party. The War Party consisted of service clubs and the three classes each performing a war dance. These dances promoted school spirit for the coming football game against our archrivals the Gaither Cowboys. Another Student Council brainstorm was the Lion Hunt Caravan. Spirited students decorated their cars in green and gold and drove in a procession to the King game to support our mighty Chiefs.

The five Senators from each class assisted the Student Council in many of their projects and activities. While both the Student Council and Senate were active in planning coming events, the Principal's Steering Committee met with Mr. Gatlin to discuss current school issues. Once again all three of these organizations, Student Council, Senate and Principal's Steering Committee, joined forced to plan the annual Homecoming assembly and Harvest Moon dance.

For the second year in a row, seniors, juniors, and sophomores alike participated in the ever-challenging Spirit Contest. Green and gold Fridays helped each class to rake in the spirit points as well as raise enthusiasm for the weekly game. They did more than serve the school. They also held a fundraiser in which each class collected money for spirit points and all of the proceeds were donated to UNICEF. Homeroom Rep. Pam Kleban expressed her view, "Student government gives students an opportunity to show their spirit and support our school!"

MEANINGFUL MESSAGES

SADD, FCS reach out to students

"Don't Drive Drunk!" cried the members of SADD. Students Against Drunk Driving was a club concerned with lowering the teenage death rate due to drinking and driving. SADD conveyed a message for students to decline from drinking at parties or, if they chose to drink, to at least have a designated driver who did not. The "Contract for Life", signed by students and their parents, was a plan to discourage students from driving drunk. This contract allowed the teenager to call his or her parents if a ride was needed. The parents had to pick up their son or daughter with no questions asked until later on. According to club sponsor. Mrs. Barbara Myers, some SADD members or their friends have been in accidents with drunk drivers and this motivated members to publicize widely. Vice-President of SADD, Yvonne Contreras, wanted to have "a lot of publicity to show people that we care."

Fellowship of Christian Students was another club whose members stood for what they believed in. Sponsor, Ms. Dianne Woodbury, said the club's main goal was to promote Christian fellowship. Differences in denominations did not matter to the group. All denominations came together at Christian Social Activities such as Christian concerts, picnics, and a fall hayride. The club members helped out at a nursing home by visiting patients. Members also participated as assistants at the Special Olympics. Ms. Woodbury felt that FCS was "a great way for Christian students to support each other in their faith." Treasurer, Cathy Estrada said, "FCS gives students a chance to talk with friends that share the interest of Christ in their lives."

NFL MEMBERS SPEAK OUT

Local and national victories are captured

What do the letters NFL stand for? National Football League? Wrong! They stand for National Forensics League! NFL was the local chapter of the nationally recognized speech and debate club. Members compete regularly in both public speaking and debate categories on local and national levels. Recently, their public speaking and debate talents were displayed in competitions with more than fifteen schools when they took third at the Florida State University Invitational and first at the Oak Ridge High School Invitational.

"Our goal this year was to give more students the opportunity to travel to competitions, since very few were able to last year due to lack of funds," stated Ms. Marjorie Marrero, NFL sponsor. The club's members accomplished this goal by having many fund-raisers including Tupperware and candy bar sales. They used the money from these fundraisers for funding traveling fares and registration fees. This made it possible to allow more students to attend and participate in many out-of-town competitions.

Also, club membership has almost doubled, Ms. Marreo feels that this is due to increased publicity of the club and the winning record of the previous years. "We hoped for membership to stay on this steady increase;" remarked Ms. Marrero, "the larger the club, the more activities it could do."

In the words of senior NFL member Mark Bryant, "NFL gave us an opportunity that high school students usually don't have to express our feelings and points of view about major social and political issues facing our community today."

THREE FACES OF DECA

Diverse attitudes establish a unique quality

Originally created in 1937, the Distributive Educational Clubs of America has grown to three separate chapters, each focusing attention on business.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Stephanie Rittenour and President Melanie Mason, club members learned more about careers in fashion as well as help benefit the school and community. A Fashion Benefit show in cooperation with Colony Shops raised money to aid in the fight against muscular dystrophy. DECA members also worked to furnish a trip to the National Apparel and Accessories Mini Conference held in New York.

A second chapter of DECA, led by Mr. Doug Stone, focused on business in a larger scope than fashion. President Scott Hagedorn led members in a fulfilling year including a Leadership Seminar held in Daytona Beach. In addition to expanding their minds, they also expanded their annual fund raiser to include printing Chief-Head boxer shorts to sell to students. One half of the proceeds raised went to the local Missing Children's Fund, while the other half was kept for future purposes.

The third DECA club directed their efforts toward business in Retail and Sales. With the original sponsor, Mr. Lyman Price, DECA directed mainly co-op students in choosing wise career decisions and learning better business skills. Candy sales helped increase the club's treasury providing greater opportunities for club members and their activities.

Working toward State and National Competitions, members learned the art of "role playing" in real business situations, advancing their studies in marketing. President Loti Ryan expressed the main objective of the club as, "It allows members to see advantages and disadvantages in business marketing."

TAKING CARE OF BUSINESS

Follow the Leaders

"Would you like to buy something from my Tom-Wat?" "From your Tom who?" "From my Tom-Wat case, it's the FBLA fundraiser and it's full of handy items for friends and family." FBLA-CBE Future Business Leaders of America — Cooperative Business Education was much more than just fundraisers. As suggested by their name, FBLA educated and prepared students to be competent, aggressive business leaders. To accomplish the goal of preparing students for the business world, FBLA concentrated on strengthening leadership ability, building self-confidence, and sharpening business skills.

To strengthen leadership ability FBLA sent club members to leadership conferences. With money from their fundraisers FBLA was able to send representatives to the State Leadership Conference at Bahia Beach in February. At the conference students learned from real executives and leaders what it takes to be a success in the business world.

Building confidence in the students and their work was the second of FBLA's goals. "By competing in contests in such things as typing, shorthand, computer skills and parliamentary procedure the students gained additional opportunities to see how well they can perform in high pressure situations," said sponsor Ms. Barr.

The last of FBLA's goals was to sharpen business skills. This was accomplished by placing students in office positions in local companies such as TIME, TECO, and NCNB. The experience of working with adults in a competitive atmosphere gave students the opportunity to make money while learning. As stated by club president, Stacy Wynn, "Earning a living while going to school has really prepared me for college."

COMPETITIVE SPIRIT

MAΘ, Computer Club Expand Academic Interests

The room falls dead silent as the second hand creeps toward the twelve. "You may begin," the proctor announces. Unlike those who took the required SAT's and Achievement Tests, Mu Alpha Theta and Computer Club members took tests because they enjoyed it.

Mu Alpha Theta, math honor society, had one of its most active years competing at county, regional, state, and national levels. Members had the opportunity to travel and compete in North Miami Beach, Palm Beach, and Fort Myers, and they ended their year at the State Convention held in Orlando.

Students were required to maintain a 3.0 GPA in math and a 3.5 GPA overall to participate. As a service, some members stayed after school to tutor others in math. What motivated members to work so hard? Treasurer Brooks Johnson replied, "I joined to compete, and I compete to win. It's a great feeling when your name is called to receive a trophy for first place!"

Finding practical applications of computers bonded Computer Club together. "It's amazing to discover the versatility of computers!" commented President Mitch Feldman.

Not only did the club compete at the Computer Club Invitational on December 1 and host a county-wide programming contest, but they worked for the school as well. To make data recall easier at the end of the year, Wednesday afternoons were spent entering locker combinations and names.

Both clubs brought recognition to themselves through competition and service to administrators, faculty, and students while studying areas they enjoyed.

BEST OF BOTH WORLDS

Diversified Co-Operative Training

Why did so many students leave every day after fifth period? Were they pardoned from sixth and seventh hour classes? Free to do what they pleased with that time? No, they were members of Diversified Co-Operative Training, DCT, who worked for this privilege. Worked was exactly what the members did because each had an after school job. All members signed a contract at the beginning of the year agreeing to the rules of the program. Each agreed to pay forty dollar dues that went toward pins, membership cards, and the employer/employee banquet at the end of the year. Working the required amount of hours was the easiest part of the program. Students had to work at least fifteen hours a week, but no more than thirty. The students and their bosses decided how they would divide the hours,allowing the students to arrange to have the weekends off.

Students took DCT and received three grades, one from their teacher, either Miss Linda Sway or Mrs. Aida Calderoni. Their bosses graded them on performance, attitude, punctuality and attendance, with attendance as the most important factor. If students were too sick to attend school, then they were not allowed to go to work. Responsibility and budgeting of money were two of the main goals of the class. Students turned in a budget sheet each week accounting for any money they spent during the week, including their paychecks, money from parents, or from their savings. Some felt this was an excellent way to prepare them for after graduation.

It was hard for some members to participate in after school activities such as sports, band, and some clubs, and attend some school functions, due to conflict in times. Yet aside from this, the members of Diversified Co-Operative Training agreed that the experience was well worth the sacrifices made.

CREATIVE MINDS MEET

Expressing artistic abilities

Creating beauty was something VICA and Art Honor Society members enjoyed doing. VICA, Vocational Industrial Clubs of America, was a club created for Cosmetology students. The club's main goal was to provide work experience. This was advantageous for members who planned to make cosmetology their profession. VICA members had several chances to learn more about their chosen profession at leadership workshops and hair shows. The girls had chances to exhibit their techniques at competitions where they had to create a unique hairstyle on a willing volunteer. Ms. JoAnn Daves, sponsor, said when VICA members graduated they were licensed and ready to work in a salon. Ms. Daves was "extremely proud of the change in the girls' working skills and relationships."

A National Honor Organization, the Art Honor Society, was a club consisting of A and B average students who had taken at least one year of art. The members had chances to learn more about art when they went to museums and exhibitions such as the Winter Park Festival. At the Festival, the students were able to ask questions about styles and techniques of art. The members went to the Festival of Trees competition which involved creating unique Christmas decorations. They also had a chance to produce artwork that would be displayed at the State Fair. Other activities were the Brotherhood/Sisterhood poster contest and the Plant City Art Festival. Mr. James Nemeth, sponsor, said membership increased by 300 percent since the previous year. Mr. Nemeth said, "I believe that this year's students are the finest students who have been involved in Art Honor Society."

"C" CLUB AND PAN AM

Working Toward Excellence

"C" Club and the Pan Am Club; two different clubs with similar purposes. Both clubs brought students together for the same reason; to excel.

The "C" Club was designed to honor those students who excelled in a special field. A letter "C" was awarded for everything from sports to academics. Drama, chorus, and band were extra-curricular activities in which a letter could be earned. A student with a 3.5 grade point average or better was eligible for an academic letter. A letter for sports depended on each sport's individual criteria. Many industrial students have lettered in more than one field. Proud students sported letter jackets through the halls. "When I got my letter for swimming, I was so proud that my hard work finally paid off!" exclaimed junior Niklas Gyllo.

Another club designed for students was the Pan Am Club. This brand new organization began for those who took Spanish as their foreign language. The club was developed to help instill an interest in the Hispanic culture in the Spanish students. Pan Am's focus for the school year was to help promote an interest in the annual International Night, where the foreign language departments gathered to share each culture's foods and types of entertainment. The club gained their funds by selling cookbooks. Members of the Pan Am Club also enjoyed having dinner in a local Spanish restaurant. President Holly Northcutt summed up Pan Am's philosophy, "Pan Am gives students a chance to really experience the heritage of the Spanish people." "C" Club and Pan Club; excellence at work.

LEADERS AND SKIERS

Both Made A Big Splash

Youth Council and Ski Club offered students excitement in different areas. Youth Council offered students an opportunity to meet with student leaders from other schools throughout the county. The members discussed important topics and posed questions to one another in hopes of bettering conditions within the schools. Tomica Lindsey stated that, "Our monthly meetings at places such as HCC are very important and allow us to examine the viewpoints of other youth councils." Mrs. Zelma Young thought highly of her Youth Council members and encouraged student involvement. "These students get a chance to do something other students can only hope to do—go and interact with students from other schools during one school day each month." Leadership qualities stood out among Youth Council members. Ski Club offered students opportunities in a very different field.

Under the leadership of Junior Suzy Priest, Ski Club became one of the most popular interest clubs. Suzy, who helped found the club last year, used the club members' unique interest in skiing to create new friendships and to give students something constructive and safe to do on the weekends. Ski Club had many able officers such as Chris Lowman who stated that Suzy was "the motivating force behind Ski Club." The club had meetings during interest club days and met at locations such as Lake Carrol, Clearwater Beach, and Treasure Island during weekend functions. Living in Florida made Ski Club a popular choice among students in search of an interest club. Ski Club's ultimate goal is to create a competitive ski team at CHS sometime in the near future. Ski Club and Youth Council were great interest clubs in that they appealed to most all students.

LATIN & GERMAN CLUBS

Give New Insights to Foreign Language Studies

The newly created Latin and German clubs came about as a result of the interest shown by students to learn more about the cultures and customs of the peoples whose language they were studying. However, learning the traditions was only one of the goals of the clubs; the others involved experiencing these traditions.

The Latin club consisted of students who were studying or had studied the language in class. Ms. Ellen Lamb described the club as "New, but blooming." Being its first year, the group has already proved itself to be fun and interesting for its eighty-four members. Marc Sacks commented that the "Latin club shows that old customs can still be fun today." The Latin club participated in Saturnalia, a holiday in which the Romans worshipped Saturn. It was celebrated in December, and the festivities included chariot races, javelin throwing, and costume contests. The Latin club also participated in the Latin Brain Bowl in which they placed first in the county.

The German club, also a new club, was open to all students who had studied or were studying German. The German club was sponsored under the supervision of Ms. Cynthia Palmer who stated that the goals of the club were "to publicize the German program to the student body." The program included activities such as numerous guest speakers and a letter exchange with German students. Member, Kirsten Burkhart joined the club in order "to gain a greater cultural awareness, rather than just the language and vocabulary learned in class." Both the Latin club and the German club provided a more in-depth understanding of the languages' origins for their members.

FCA AND FHA

Opposites Attract

Self-awareness, peer pressure, and physical fitness were just some of the topics that FCA and FHA emphasized. Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Future Homemakers of America certainly appeared different in their purpose. However an important common goal that both clubs shared was helping students to develop into responsible adults.

FHA, a co-curricular club, was geared to teaching the student more about themselves. In the Student Body Program they alerted students about the nutritional sources in food which are most important to overall physical fitness. The club also had fundraisers which raised enough money to send officers to leadership conferences and other active members to compete in Proficiency Events. The Leadership Conference in November was attended by both FCA and FHA and here officers learned how to organize and plan projects.

In the Proficiency Events which were held in January, clothes construction, and storytelling were events which required organization. The outfits, props, and scenery were made from scratch and then presented before a panel of judges. Susan Wilson, FHA Treasurer, felt that the events were the "best example of how cooperation and good leadership skills work together to create a good club."

Besides cooperation and good leadership FCA sponsor Billy Turner, felt that "a club where students can come together and express their feelings and beliefs in a friendly atmosphere." was the most important part of the club's function. Kim Brown an active senior member of FCA also felt that the club served to join the student body. She claimed that "Projects like the Speical Olympics really bring out the spirit of the club. Everyone wanted to help."

WHAT ENTHUSIASM!

Red Cross and Spirit Club Get Involved

We've got spirit yes we do. We've got spirit how about you? Getting involved attracted students to both Red Cross and Spirit Club.

Red Cross, led by fourth-year sponsor, Ms. Virginia Vierra, participated in numerous events, and through these experiences the members learned a great deal about themselves as well as others. They began with the annual blood drive, and then in November, the club began visiting nursing homes throughout the city. Red Cross Council members also helped with the Special Olympics by encouraging and supporting all of the participants. This project helped them to understand the importance of service by emphasizing the need for people to care for and encourage others. The rewards of their encouragement were seen in the hugs, laughter, and smiles, of all the participants.

Another student-oriented club was the Spirit Club. Spirit Club began with a search for a new sponsor, and their search led them to first year sponsor, Dr. Jerry Somers. With his help, the officers and members began spreading school spirit.

President Stacy Jacobs began by uniting the members with new club t-shirts. During the football season, members made banners to show their support. To reward students for wearing green and gold during the spirit contest, Spirit Club members distributed candy bags. They also supported all of the other teams, by making posters and by attending many of the activities.

The Spirit Club gave the students a chance to express their spirit in an organized and fun manner. Junior Michele Ghezzi summed up the club's enthusiasm by saying, "Spirit Club lets the students show their awesome spirit for our school!"

PLAYING SOME NEW NOTES

Enthusiasm strengthens the band program

Many new and original ideas were put into effect to expand the band program. First-year band director George Farmer stated, "Chamberlain has a lot of talent. I want to give those students a chance to show their talent through music." He began by enlarging the symphonic band from 40 to about 70 members. By doing this, every one was given a chance to play challenging music.

The symphonic band rehearsed everyday in woodwind and brass class. But for a better sound, Farmer began full band rehearsals one day a week after school. For concerts, the band dressed in formal black gowns and coats and ties. He also plans to start an orchestra next year. These new ideas and his enthusiastic attitude brought excitement to all members.

Another area focused on was fund-raising. The band held a cheese and sausage sale, a bikathon, and the Homecoming barbeque. The funds raised were used for buying new school instruments and for the trip to Ft. Myers in the spring where the jazz and symphonic bands competed separately in a nationwide competition.

The bands also competed in district contest and had several all-state and all-county members. Many students also played at the district and state solo and ensemble contests. In addition, the bands had a full schedule of performances. From two fall concerts to the end of the year awards concert, the band was kept working hard. "Mr. Farmer knows what he's doing. He inspires us to do our very best. But most importantly, he treats each of us as a person and has lots of new ideas, which is what the Chamberlain band needs," remarked Wendy Nelson, a senior flute player.

COMEDY AND TRAGEDY

The Stage Is Set

"There are a lot of creatively gifted students in the program; they're very enthusiastic," commented Ms. Monica Ramirez. Ms. Ramirez began her first year at Chamberlain with a dance show called Alley Magic. An open audition to participate in the production was held in September and rehearsals continued until Alley Magic opened in December. "Three months to rehearse seems like a long time, but for a production of this size, three months really isn't enough," said Mark Bryant who narrated Alley Magic, "it's been fun and a good learning experience for both the cast and the crew, I hope the Drama Department will be able to sponsor another project like this next year." Students showed their appreciation by insuring that the event was well attended at all performances.

Literary Forum, in its third year, gave Drama II students an opportunity to be judged by their peers in performances of The Crucible and Beowulf. "The chance to present Literary Forum has helped to broaden our theatrical skills," said Debra Brock, Drama II student. While Drama I students battled stage fright, Drama III prepared for One Act Competition with Arabelle's The Two Executioners and Harold Pinter's Old Times. Their hard work paid off and One Act Competition was a success. "You really can't lose, competition is a great experience," said Drama III student Brenna Fender.

Throughout the year, Drama provided a creative outlet as well as an educational experience for students. The standard "act well your part, for there all the honor lies," was the traditional theme for the year and was well observed by all in the program.

"The dancers know what to do, and they get it done," Ms. Ramirez.

THEATRE SPIRIT SOARS

Superior Standing kept intact

Devoted to entertainment and cultural enrichment through the performing arts, Thespian and Drama members were drawn together by their love of theatre. Sharing their dedication was Mrs. Monica Ramirez, the new Thespian sponsor. Her arrival brought innovative ideas for the upcoming year. Investing all their energy to complete a multitude of projects throughout the year, Thespian and Drama members accomplished many activities. Their successful presentations of "Alley Magic", a dance production, and "The Impossible Years", a modern farce served to expand their budget, their devotion, and their relationships with their peers. They used the money made from selling t-shirts and tickets to continually increase their work facilities as a whole. The purchase of new curtains and a new stage did just that.

Participating in District and State competition also gave Thespian and Drama members invaluable experiences. They received straight superior awards in the categories of monologues, duet acting, duet improvisations, and dance. They also earned superiors in One-Act competition in the categories of costume design, lighting plots, and playwrighting. In addition, the dance troupe accepted a special invitation to represent their district in State Competition.

President Alison Midili captured the spirit saying, "Being a Thespian has allowed me a close-up look at the many working parts of theatre that join together in the grandeur of a production."

New sponsor Mrs. Monica Ramirez leads her troupe to success.

CONCERT CHORUS TUNES IN

Twenty-five Years of Excellent Productions

"To be the best we can be" — a goal the male and female vocalists of Concert Chorus strove to achieve under the direction of Mr. Daniel Compher. The members spent long and hard hours singing and concentrating on a widely diverse selection of tunes. Stacey Howard pointed out, "We sang pop music, classicals, madrigals, and even spirituals." The chorus performed a number of concerts open the school and public, including the annual Reflections, Fall, Winter, and Spring shows.

A special concert was performed during the school day in celebration of the commemoration of the Constitution in which Betty Castor, the Education Commissioner of the state of Florida, directed the chorus. During the assembly, Castor presented the choir with a newly created award representing twenty-five years of excellence.

All the hard work and dedication was again evident in the superior performances on the district and state levels. As a result of the amount of time spent practicing as a group, the people in the group formed a unique bond among themselves. Mr. Compher stated that, "because they are all striving for the same goal together, there is a unity that is not found in other classes."

However, Concert Chorus also proved to be a growing experience. When asked why she participated in the class for two years, Senior Katalin Martino replied, "It helps develop mental control, self-confidence, and coordination."

Because of the avid interest in the class and the music, the students pushed each other to work hard. From the support inside and outside the classroom, Chamberlain Concert Chorus has proved to be one of the best in the state.

ACT I - A CLASS ACT

Group Practices Pay Off

Music, dance, and performances were all the factors that brought Act I together. Although there were only four returning singers and four returning musicians, the group was very productive. They participated in many productions, such as Three Nights, Three's Company, school performances, and Christmas carols at Franklin Street Mall and Plant Museum.

To add to their accomplishments, the group received superiors at solo districts, choral districts, and state choral festivals. The motivating forces behind Act I's superior performance was their desire to please audiences as well as their goal to improve their diverse talents.

In formulating new routines, the group must learn different aspects of the entire performance. The music is selected by the director, Mr. Daniel Compher, with the help of the singers and musicians. Current pop songs as well as older melodies are fused together into a single performance. The intricate dance steps that the group performs are choreographed by different members. When preparing for a new show, the first step is learning the new song. After the singers have perfected it, they must put the dance steps together with the music that the musicians provide.

The twenty-four members must accomplish a number of things in their hour-a-day class time. The final result of their work is a group of singers, dancers, and musicians working as one complete unit. The group's attitude was summed up by Stacey Howard who said, "We had almost a whole new group of people this year, but we all improved and learned a lot from each other."

TUNING FOR PROGRESSION

Two Choruses Learn Valuable Lessons

"Ma-ma-ma-ma-mi-mi-mi-mi-mi!" A frustrated student crying out in desperation for Mother? No, not this time. For the students in Mixed and Women's Chorus, class always began on a "high note."

These two choruses began as classes for "beginners." They were considered to be the link between Junior High Chorus and Senior High Concert Chorus. As the year progressed, though, the Mixed and Women's Choruses proved to be more than just transition steps. These classes gave the students an opportunity to better understand a whole new world — the world of music.

Lory Manchester exclaimed, "We're not just singing, we're learning how to sing!" Her words reflected the main goal of these classes. The students learned how to read music, how to warm-up, and how to rehearse for concerts. Mr. Daniel Compher, choral director, never expected perfection. He only expected his students to work hard and, as their motto stated, "Be the best that we can be."

The hard work paid off, too. Each group gave three concerts — a Fall Concert, a Holiday Concert, and a Spring Concert. Also, both classes went to District Festival, and plans were made to go to State Festival. State, being more strict, had higher requirements — only students making superiors at District could go.

An essential element in Chorus involved cooperation of the students in various projects. Each member had to know his abilities and combine them with others' abilities to produce a "good sound." Likewise, students worked together to sell tickets to performances. The students used the money to pay for transportation and to buy music.

LOOKS MAY BE DECEIVING

FFA and SAC, More than what meets the eye

"I had the wrong idea about FFA," said Kristine Miller a first year Future Farmers of America member. The main focus of this organization was not only farming, but also exploring the area of agribusiness. Many members put these skills to work when they participated in contests sponsored by The Florida State Fair and The Strawberry Festival. FFA was not just a club; it was also a class which opened its doors to disabled persons for hands-on experience with agriculture. FFA raised funds through their annual plant sale. The proceeds from this sale were used to pay for improvements in the FFA land lab. One of the additions included the installation of a new drainage and sprinkler system for their lab. Since the club received approval for the permanent stay of the farm animals on campus; a holding area was built for these animals by the students. FFA proved that you can't judge a book by its cover. Similarly, SAC, Student Advisory Committee was also a very active group. Mrs. Zelma Young, the sponsor for SAC, encouraged the members to "link people with people". SAC members participated in their annual National Brotherhood/Sisterhood Week, during which essay and poster contests were held. SAC also promoted communication between parents and teachers by holding a breakfast for them to meet and discuss racial problems among high school students. SAC stressed non-partisan relations between students. The members also took steps such as, calming the tension of students at our football games. Hard work paid off for both organizations. They accomplished the goals they set. As a result both clubs through their efforts benefited the student body, teachers and the community.

From the time we arrive at Chamberlain a confused and disorganized sophomore until we reach the coveted position of an experienced an confident senior, many changes occur in our actions and attitudes.

Sophomores — not only were they forced to ride the bus, bum rides off of upperclassmen, or depend on Mom and Dad for transportation, but they were also forced to fulfill their semester credit in Personal Fitness.

Juniors — proudly displaying their newly acquired class rings and letter jackets, most were initiated into the wild world of driving and introduced to that dreaded monster called the "SAT". They still had the seniors to look up to before becoming the role models themselves.

And finally . . . Seniors — suffering from severe cases of senioritis, they battled the SAT and Final GPA demons and prepared for that elusive day in June by ordering pictures, graduation announcements, and caps and gowns. They were rewarded for their efforts with Grad Nite, Prom, Senior Send-off, and exemption from final exams.

Exhilarated, confused, determined, spirited . . . All these faces reflected the diversity found in our halls, yet are all part of the unified face of the chief. Fads, fashions, and trends enabled us to stand apart as an individual. Our possibilities of self-expression were almost limitless and they all consolidated to create our interpretation of the chief. As we met more and more distinct faces they grew to be more than just faces — they became friends. Common interests and day to day hassles inspired relationships that developed both in and out of school. In school we found links in academics, clubs, and sports. Out of school we enjoyed parties and endured hardships together, sharing both the smiles and the tears. During the year, we were able to maintain unity highlighted by individuality — while retaining our own face we blended to form the chief.

SENIORS

"Seniority" Leads Class

Headed by three year president Sharon Chudnow, the senior class officers were committed to creating and leading what they hoped would be one of the best classes to graduate. All the officers, also including three-year vice-president Kenny Suarez, two year treasurer Ronda Mercer, and secretary Amy Fleck worked hard on various projects throughout the year so that the senior class would be remembered for years to come. They organized the Talent Show for the senior class fundraiser to help pay for senior prom. By urging all the seniors to participate in different spirit contests during each nine weeks, the senior class placed second overall. The officers utilized their experience to give the senior class an exciting, memorable year.

Tokens and Memories for the Future

As the year drew to an end, college became more and more of a reality for seniors. Letters of acceptance arrived from college with information about orientation and housing facilities. Some seniors chose to room with a high school friend while others went the 'pot luck' route. Needless to say, college life, college courses, and college parties were the topic of conversation.

Perhaps the most popular question discussed in talks of college was what seniors wanted to take most with them to college. Some seniors wanted to take their car, their stereo, their pets, or their best friend. Many senior couples wanted to take their boyfriend or girlfriend. Others wanted to take good old Mom whose cooking and laundry skills are never appreciated more than during that first semester of college. But as the list grew on high school memories remained at the top.

Expressing the grievances of Huyen Nguyen, this hell portrays the "sins" of many parents.

In all shapes and sizes, many of the hell projects are displayed in the English hall.

"What the hell . . .?"

That's what some students said in Mrs. Sarrett's AP English classes when they were assigned to read Dante's Inferno and create a modern hell over winter break. The students chose a wide variety of topics, including dental, airplane, employment, and even Christmas Hell. The actual assignment was to develop a modern hell and to contrive sins and punishments in accordance to that "hell." For example, in Scott Nault's "Cat Hell," for the sin of clawing and tearing up curtains, the sinning cat was transformed into a curtain and "poked and prodded and clawed by the trident tails of imp cats." Most students agreed that the project was a creative highlight of the class, and John Berlo added, "Making a modern hell took a little imagination and effort, but the actual work came easy because the assignment was so much fun."

Viva Italia!

For thirteen seniors and three chaperones, Italy became a reality over spring break as they toured Rome, Venice, Milan, and various other Italian cities. Aside from seeing the sights and visiting historical and art museums, the cosmopolitans had the free time to check out European fashion, experience some Italian cuisine, and get a taste of Italy's night life in the many discos and theaters; and they were kept out of trouble by sponsors Mrs. Sarrett, Mrs. Martin, and Mrs. Bittmann. Even though the travelers spent two days of the nine-day trip flying, some of the more experienced tourists used it to their advantage. Jason Crum commented, "I actually enjoy the feeling of flying and was able to use the time to keep up my log book, catch up on rest, and prepare for the remainder of the trip."

College applications: "Ugh!" or "Aah . . ."

"Hey, John! Wanna go out this weekend?" . . . "No, I have to do college applications." Many seniors, like John, spent at least a few weekends locked in their rooms until they completed their college applications. For some students, their work began as early as the summer and ended as late as the beginning of the second semester. But for students like Greg Dworzanowski, the job was finished at the beginning of October. That's because Greg applied for early admission and was accepted to Duke University. Better chances for acceptance and absolute dedication led him to apply for early admission into Duke. His acceptance took an enormous amount of pressure off of him and "made for a more relaxed senior year." The early decision plan offered security to seniors, but only if they knew that they would be happy at that school.

Other seniors were not so sure about which college they wanted to attend and, like Amy Elozory, applied to several extremely desirable colleges and one "fall-back" school if they were not accepted to their favorites. The main disadvantage to the regular decision plan, though, was the "anxiety and nervousness" of waiting for replies in April.

Whether seniors chose early or regular admission, most agreed that the essays were the most difficult part of the applications because, as Amy expressed, "your whole life could depend on one essay."

It's Friday

Brrrrrring! Seniors burst out of their classrooms, relieved to have two whole days without school. It was Friday, and the weekend had finally arrived!

What was the first thing seniors thought about when it came to the weekends? "Relaxing!", stated Shelby Harkness. Sarah Keener claimed, "We (seniors) need a break from all the pressures—our schoolwork plus the college application deadlines. The weekend gives us time to relax and get our acts together before Monday comes again!"

What was there to do?

The favorite spot on a Friday or Saturday night was McDonald's. From there, friends got together and found out what was going on that evening. If there weren't any parties, the movies were still popular. Yet due the average five dollar fee it cost to go to a Tampa theater, many students rented a video for three dollars instead.

Was that all there was for a senior to do? No! Some seniors travelled to Clearwater's teen night club, Off Limits, where students danced the night away. The eighteen-year olds of our class ventured to Tampa Jai-Alai, to watch an exciting game while placing bets.

Saturday and Sunday were for trips to the beach, sporting events, or working on that infamous homework due Monday morning.

Working for A Living

"I need spending money!" cried Chris Moore, who worked as a cook at Fuddruckers. Many seniors worked around the Bay Area to earn money for a social life, a car, a senior trip, and even college.

Alessi Farmer's Market opened a number of jobs for students. Carolyn Sandefer, who worked at the Alessi Candy Counter, said, "This job is fun and it keeps me busy." Other Tampa businesses such as Publix Supermarket, Busch Gardens and The Limited clothing store kept students employed in the summer and year round.

The working student's favorite day was every other Friday, when their bosses would hand them those deserving paychecks.

Sun and Fun All Year Long

If a group of seniors were asked the question "What do you like to do on a sunny day?," they would probably answer, "Go to the beach". Since Florida weather is so nice, seniors were able to venture to the beach year round, if they desired.

Most seniors said they went to Clearwater beach because "it's the place where everyone meets." When Beach Week was in session, however, seniors could be found staying at places as far as Treasure Island. Beach Week was a time for students to "get away from it all and spend time having fun." Spring Break also allowed seniors more time to soak up the sun and strive for that golden tan. But for whatever occasion, seniors such as Lauren Dembo agree that "The beach is the only place to be on a sunny day."

Is There Life After High School?

One question that plagued seniors all year long was, "What am I going to do with the rest of my life?" While some found the answer easier than others, all agreed that the pressure to decide was always present.

Some students decided to enlist in the armed forces, while others ventured directly into the work force. However, the majority of seniors decided that college classes would benefit them more than anything else. But that choice was followed by the decision of which school to attend and what major the senior wanted to pursue.

No matter what a senior's post-graduation plans consisted of, most seniors agreed that graduation from high school was an exciting prospect. Some seniors, like Ginger Schnurman, were looking forward to graduation because, "then I can finally be on my own."

One On One Beats the Books

"As I visited several countries abroad I found that meeting with the people was more educational compared to what I've learned from books," said Joy Milner who participated in the People to People Student Ambassador Program. The People to People program originated under Dwight D. Eisenhower's presidency. The main objective of the program was to create better foreign relations starting with the backbone of our country, children. After a long process of applications and a personal interview, Joy Milner was selected out of thousands of applicants to become one of thirty one Student Ambassadors from the United States. Joy's "Grand Tour" commenced with a two day orientation in Washington D. C. with President Reagan. From Washington Joy traveled to England, Scotland, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, and Russia. In select countries homestays were offered to Joy. This experience enlightened Joy. She learned that living with the natives of the country in which she stayed gave her a better understanding about the country itself rather than reading a book which cannot equate the impact of a real life experience. This experience in the host countries led to the development of pen pals and lasting friendships. Overall, her acceptance into the program and the adventure of the trip was, in Joy's words, "The most fun and educational extravaganza; I would want to do it all over again."

Thumbs Up or Thumbs Down

What did your senior class rate as their favorite and worst movie and television show Scott Sanders, an avid movie goer, said that he gave the movie Three Men and a Baby thumbs up. The hit at the box offices were movies that dealt with babies; for example some of the top movies were For Keeps, Raising Arizona and Baby Boom, just to name a few. But the family outlook was not just on the big screen, but also on the little screen. Most of the top ten television programs were based around a family. Full House, My Two Dads, Family Ties and of course The Cosby Show; just to name a few. Seniors gave all of these shows thumbs up. But what about the worst movies and television programs.

"I gave thumbs down to Return of the Living Dead (part II)", said Wendy Perry. "I'm tired of all of the continuations to movies and movies that grotesque death is the plot. Seniors all agreed that the worst television programs were: The Equalizer, Dallas, Dynasty, and Dolly Parton's show. One of the most surprising answers to the survey given was the love for Saturday cartoons, but this was also the most denied television show. According to the movie and television critics they agreed with our senior class proving overall that seniors have great taste. As a final note seniors gave their last year a thumbs up!

It's My Business

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to run your own business? Well, Denon Ploor has been doing just that for three years through an organization called Junior Achievement. JA is a program that enables interested high school students to start their own "corporation". The students are arranged in groups of 15 or 20 and they begin by electing officers and choosing an item to sell. Then they sell stock, buy materials, and advertise. Each group has an advisor from a major corporation, such as GTE, who works with them once a week and helps with the books.

"I love the program because it gives you a real hands-on experience—something most people don't get until they finish college," remarked senior Denon Ploor.

A Trip To Independence

"Have a nice trip, see you next fall!" is one statement seniors won't be telling each other as a joke this year. Different from all previous years, the senior class can't simply say goodbye until next fall . . . They will all be going separate ways.

Therefore, many feel the last summer before college is one that should be spent on a special trip with close friends. Some students choose to go on senior cruise—a trip planned solely for this purpose. The cruise to Nassau is arranged only for seniors and lasts four days. Others set up their own trips to places such as Georgia, California, or Mexico.

The place seniors choose doesn't really matter. It's simply a chance for them to have a fun time together and get their first real taste of independence.

For Seniors, the S.A.T. commonly became known as the stress test.*

The Stress Test

"The S.A.T. is very important in determining whether or not a college will accept you," said senior Stephen Shouse. The Standard Achievement Test, commonly shown as the S.A.T., was taken by seniors who were considering applying to an in-state or out of state university.

This test in particular measures students' abilities to do college level work and is becoming a mandatory requirement for colleges. In fact, these test results pull as much weight with college admissions officers as do a student's grade point average. And as the emphasis grew on S.A.T. scores, so did the anxiety of students.

Many students attended outside testing programs designed to strengthen seniors scores by introducing them to the test-taking atmosphere. The English department initiated a trial preparation course that served as a review of skills students encounter on the S.A.T. Taking advantage of these opportunities students felt more prepared and ended up with stronger scores.

The Big Change of Pow Wow and Closed Campus

Change highlighted the year for seniors. Ump-pa-pa, Ump-pa-pa. That was the sound of change when it came to Pow-Wow. The War Party was the first of the changes that aroused a great amount of controversy among seniors. Many students thought it was a great change and enjoyed the idea of dressing like cowboys and Indians which was appropriate for the Gaither game. On the other hand, quite a few seniors expressed a hope that next year's class would return to the traditional Pow Wow ceremony.

Another major change was closed campus. On account of previous occurrences, the school was mandated to relinquish the privilege of open campus from students. This meant students could no longer walk off campus to the corner store, Curly's, or Burger King for lunch. The administration took immediate action in order to compensate for problems that arose with a closed campus. The lunchroom was renovated and expanded in order to meet these needs. An extension was added to provide a new snack and salad line and the new teachers' cafeteria. Plans and building underway, first semester still brought with it grumblings from seniors at the cramped accomodations. Lunch-lines were long and tables were scarce. But by second semester Chief Ump-pa-pa's Deli and a remodeled patio relieved tensions and brought satisfaction to students and the administration.

Not everybody agreed that these changes were appropriate or beneficial but compromises were made and needs were met. Still, more changes were to come and not all of them would affect the graduating class of '88. Yet change highlighted the year for seniors — change in status, change in priviledges, change in tradition.

National Honor Society

Leadership, Character, Scholarship, Service. These four traits were once again the essential qualities found in National Honor Society members, along with a GPA over 3.5. Through a careful selection process conducted by a panel of teachers, the applicants were rated and narrowed down. Members chose to observe National Education Week by giving every teacher an apple and a thank-you card. Roses were also distributed to each of the departments.

National Honor Society showed its community interest and support by participating in the annual canned food drive at Christmas and by acting as ushers at District Marching Contest. In February, a team of four members competed in the district-wide Brain Brawl where they matched their wits against other students.

The Class of '89 Shines

With brand new officers and a brand new attitude, the class of 1989 sailed through their junior year with never-ending energy and excitement. President Alison Knott, Vice-President Tammy Woeckner, secretary Scott Steiss, and treasurer Kevin Reeves were all good friends who worked well together to boost their class's budget as well as its morale.

Many hours of hard work were put in by caring juniors towards their Homecoming float, called "Bag the Bird!" Their effort did not go unrewarded as the Juniors won the Float Contest hands down.

"Getting involved" was Alison Knott's motto, and her class did just that when they won the Student Council Spirit Contest. By selling Chamberlain High School Telephone Books as their fundraiser, the juniors boosted their budget.

The unanimous reason for raising the money was explained by Alison: "We want next year and Prom to be the best ever!"

"Dyeing" to Make Money

Grab a handful of rubber bands, a white Hanes T-shirt, and some colorful dyes and what have you got? The hottest new fashion of the season: tie dyes. Junior Stephanie Blank saw the demand for this popular apparel and grasped the opportunity to earn a few extra bucks. She began her own tie-dye business at home, taking orders at school and delivering the finished product a few days later.

At a mere $6.00 a shirt, students flocked to Stephanie with their personal requests. Guys as well as girls bought the shirts and the most popular color for both sexes was purple. Soon students began asking for tie-dyed boxers, which were sold for $5.00 a pair. Stephanie began putting labels on her products and named her new business "S.B. Yazoo Shirt Co." When asked how all this started, Stephanie replied, "The first shirt I sold was on the bus one morning to Gino Flores. Ever since then it's been a fun and easy way to make money. I enjoy seeing my handywork on my friends' backs, and the extra dollars in my wallet are also a sight for sore eyes!"

Surrounded by her popular tie-dyed shirts, Stephanie Blank smiles as she counts her profits and makes another sale for S.B. Yazoo Shirt Co.*

Kiss and Tell First Kisses

Although it might have been a little awkward, and possibly a little embarrassing, a first kiss is usually something no one forgets. These are what some juniors experienced when they had their first kiss.

My first kiss was: . . .

. . . "in 6th grade. I got dared to kiss this nasty guy in the closet; I ended up running out screaming 'Gross'!" — Tabbi Orr.

. . . "in July 1983 at camp. It started out as a long goodnight, but . . . Well, I was only 12." — Jay Michealson

. . . "in 1st grade. I chased this guy down at P.E. and laid this huge kiss on him." — Elizabeth Nichols

. . . "in 3rd grade out recess. I was tackled and kissed on the lips. It wasn't very good, though, all I could taste was dirt!" — Don Simone

. . . "in 6th grade. The guy didn't know how to kiss, and I was really scared that our braces would get caught." — Nicole Perez

. . . "I think that I'd definitely better plead the fifth on this one!" — Curtis Beech

Reinacting their first kiss, Jennifer Apgar and Chris Weiss enjoy the memory.*

Enjoying the time spent with her horse, Suzie Fryzel gives it a bit to eat after a day of hard exercise and practice for competition.*

A Horse Is A Horse

Taking care of any pet is usually a big responsibility, but Suzie Fryzel's horse is twice the size and twice the work. Her horse, "Mine for Keeps", is kept and fed at Showcase Farms, but Suzie exercises him five or six times a week and takes care of him herself. She spends a lot of time at the stables but loves every minute of it.

Suzie's been riding for five years and has won numerous ribbons and trophies at horse shows. These shows are at the Tampa Equestric Center, Tampa Fair grounds, and other places. The competition involves jumping on an eight jump course and being judged in an under saddle class. Suzie says, "I really love the sport and the individual relationship that I have with the horse. This horse is definitely "Mine for Keeps!"

In Pursuit Of Perfection

When asked to describe the "perfect" guy or girl, Juniors were quick to specify all the qualities they held especially high.

Many girls felt it necessary to "look up" to their ideal male by requesting height to be no shorter than 5'11" and no taller than 6'2". Also eyes of green and dark hair were the most popular combination Finally, an overbuilt muscular body lost out to a fit and firm body, with chests coming in second only to nice "buns" which rounded out the perfect male for the girls.

The guys fell back on tradition demanding blond hair with sparkling blue eyes. Well-developed legs also seemed an important characteristic. As far as attitudes were concerned, many guys felt conceit and vanity were a real "turn off".

The most important characteristic specified by both sexes was a great personality. Humor mixed with good understanding was the obvious favorite in one's pursuit for perfection.

The Latest In What's Happening

What was more interesting than hanging out at the Mall or catching another movie at Mission Bell? Some Juniors found a unique way to spend their free time. Located across the bay in St. Petersburg, the Salvadore Dali Museum offered a variety of artwork for all to enjoy and appreciate.

The museum attracted many students because of the unusual and even "bizarre" artwork it has to offer. Visitors were treated to art, sculptures, and drawings all uniquely colored and portrayed. Though most museums are often viewed as boring by some, Juniors found the Dali Museum an exciting change of pace. In all, the museum provided a not-so-common place for students to relax and observe the latest in cultural "pop art".

So be prepared! The next new "hot spot" might not be a new night club or a new fashion mall. It might just be one of your favorite local museums.

A Well-Balanced Individual

It's a rarity to find a student who can balance a wide variety of activities in order to remain among the top in her class. Junior Donna Reefe has proven herself to be one such student. Not only is she a talented athlete, but she is also a diligent student.

Donna's physical activities were many, both in school and within our community. As setter she was an essential part of the girls' volleyball team. Locally she earned an Honorable Mention from the All-County Volleyball Team and she is an active member of the Tampa Bay Juniors' Volleyball Club. She also was a very important part of the girls' varsity tennis team.

Donna is also very inclined in the academic field. Classes such as Physics 1H and English 3H are a challenge, but she is sure to keep her grades high in these subjects. Donna has maintained a well-balanced junior year.

Judgment Day At Mission Bell

"Under 17 not admitted without parent" — How many times have we heard this line during a commercial for a rated "R" movie? Most people don't pay much attention to this warning, but for some sixteen-year-old juniors this is a challenge. These students think that this is an opportunity to see how old and mature they appear to people who are supposedly qualified to judge. The boys like to unbutton their shirts and attempt to enhance their peach fuzz in an effort to fool the cashier while girls wear mini-skirts and overdo their make-up. It can really become a big production, and nothing can compare to the feeling of accomplishment a person has when the ticket-seller grants them entrance. The person at the ticket window unknowingly can make or break a junior's self-image. For those juniors who don't want to risk being "carded" a PG-13 movie is a reasonable alternative even though the sex, violence, and profanity of the "R" movie are sacrificed.

Juniors Walk Down The Write Path.

How many times did you come to school only to be asked, "Did you do your WEP?" Most students forgot and did it in class or during lunch. There were a few, however, who not only remembered to finish it at home, but who also wrote additional essays for extra credit and Literary Competitions.

Junior Mark Kanarek won $75 when he placed second in the county for the Optimiss Club's Heritage of Democracy Essay Competition. Jay Michaelson, who has entered many competitions, received $300 for winning second place in the University of South Florida's Business College's Essay Competition on the American Economic Experience.

Michaelson also submitted a one act play for USF's playwriting competition, in which he received an Excellent award. Literary Competitions served to enhance the participants' skills while allowing them to prepare for future activities.

After winning second place in an essay competition and receiving $300, junior Jay Michaelson relaxes and awaits his next challenge.*

The fall dance production, "Alley Magic", gives dancers Tracy Wertheimer and Tonya Davis an opportunity to show their talents.

Junior Performers Are a Class Act

Everyone always heard about the talented athletes and academicians, but what about the talented artists, dancers and musicians that had an interest in the performing arts. The fall dance production, "Alley Magic", changed that and allowed all to show their talents. Although the show was not restricted to just one class, many of the performers and participants were juniors. The sets and scenery incorporated painters such as Seth Buchanan to create a new, different world on the stage. Gus Kalimtgis, the piano man, warmed up before the shows with bits and phrases from concertos and symphonies. The artists and musicians were only the support for the main show, the dancing. Junior dancers such as Chris Weiss and Angie Smith gave 100% all three nights. Academics and athletics weren't the only qualities found at CHS, and the junior performers proved just that.

Sophomores Take Up The Challenge

The sophomore class worked hard to service their school and the community. The officers of the sophomore class worked well with the officers of the junior and senior class and received merit for their individule achievements.

By creating a committee, the sophomore class officers participated in the can food drive with the other classes. The sophomore officers also cooperated with the junior and senior class officers in preparation for Harvest Moon. In contrast, the sophomores competed with the other classes by creating a dance at war party and won the UNICEF drive with a contribution of $95.85.

Recognition for his leadership was given to Chris Suarez when he was elected to represent the sophomore class in the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation. When asked of the goal of the sophomore class, President April Alonzo replied, "We just want to promote spirit and interest among our classmates for our school.

The Dawn Of A New Adventure

For the naive sophomores, the first day of high school is usually a very frightening and traumatic experience.

"Early to bed, early to rise," was the motto for the sophomores on the night before school, hoping that a well rested body would cope better with the casualties of the first day of high school. As they entered the main hall, desperately searching for a map of the school, the sophomores were marauded by belligerent upperclassmen trying to sell elevator passes. Receiving their schedules in homeroom, the sophomores found a bit of comic relief when they were given two fifth period classes. However, as they transgress the road to maturity, one question will remain in their minds. "Where is the four hundred hall?"

Wondering where they are in the school, sophomores try to find their next class.*

Sophomore Liz Vasey is striving to reach the star she's beginning to reach them through community and professional theatre.

Talented Soph Persuses Goal

Many people have hobbies that they persue outside of school, but very few are as serious as Liz Vasey. This Sophomore acts professionally at local dinner and community theatres. And in the past four years, she has been in over thirty musical productions including "Wizard of Oz", "Oklahoma", "Sound of Music", "South Pacific", "Finian's Rainbow", and "Carousel". Also, she has a major role during the summer of 87 in Theatre USF's production of "A My Name is Alice."

Liz is in Drama 2 and has participated in many school acting and technical workshops. She has also been studying voice for four years with local teachers and in New York.

When asked why she enjoys acting she replied, "Theatre allows you to do things and be characters that without it, you could never be."

"Tell the Teachers I'm Surfing"

"Surf's up!" "Hang ten!" "What's up, Dude?!" Sound familiar? Well, for any high school student this lingo has become almost as widely known as the Shakespearean or Dantean languages studied in English class. Surfing—the sport that has captured the heart, soul, body, and mind of most teenagers became the wildest rage of the eighties.

Surfer girls can be identified by their blonde hair, dark skin, long shorts, and brightly colored T-shirts. Their personalities are molded after Gidget, the surfer girl sweetheart of the 60's. Surfer guys, on the other hand, can be spotted a mile away. Their cars are equipped with surfing stickers on the bumper and back window and a brightly colored surfboard on the roof. "Tell the teachers I'm surfing," a line by the Beach Boys gives the perfect description of their carefree attitudes. Clothes, attitudes, bumper stickers, weekends, spare time: for some students surfing is a way of life—the only way of life.

The weekend's arrival finds Paul Kramer bringing his surfboard out to the car in preparation for the long trip to Daytona Beach.

Playing instruments and using vocals correctly, the main components of any band, requires hard work as was learned by Jim Stevenson, Jim Dumford, Kevin Webb, and Shawn Aaron.

Music Makes the World Turn Round

"Practice makes perfect"—an old cliche which was strictly followed by many students. After school, on weekends, and during spare time many sophomores dedicated themselves to their hobbies. Students such as Shawn Aaron, Jim Stevens, Jim Dumford, and Kevin Webb, spent alot of time and effort to perfect the performance of their bands. When they were not rehearsing numbers or doing homework, they were watching MTV or going to concerts to see their favorite rock stars perform. "We all have a common goal," Shawn Aaron stated, "Someday we all plan on being famous musicians." The members of the bands wrote their own words to hard rock music they performed. "We plan on playing gigs in night clubs," Jim Stevens said optimistically. "We have special talents. Special talents that can bring in big profits. I guess you could call it a money-making hobby."

After a hard day of exams Sophomore Scott Kolar appreciates the comfort of riding home in a car, courtesy of big sis Kelly.

Doing the Sophomore Shuttle

For most Sophomores the infamous Sophomore shuttle wasn't the ideal form of transportation but leave it to an ingenius class to come up with new ways to make the trip to and from school more enjoyable. Scott Kolar found that missing the bus was a good way to bum a ride off his older sister Kelly. Activities after school were another way to avoid the bus and Sophomore swimmers often found their way home in Audrey Shaw's car. But this friendly Senior felt that "there's always room for one more!" And amazing as it may sound not all Sophs. dreaded the 'yellow limosine' Robin Ruskiewicz felt that "Even though it's great being offered rides by Seniors I like the bus because most of my friends ride it. Of course next year will be the best once I get my license and if I get a car." Yet by this time next year Sophs. will be longing for the days of the free bus ride—remembering driving means gas money.

Sophs. Head to the Mountains.

Christmas Break was greatly anticipated by Sophomores, especially those who took part in the trip to Windy Gap, North Carolina. This trip sponsored by Young Life was a place where Sophomores could ski, go horseback riding, and play football with upperclassmen in a relaxed atmosphere. As in Young Life's weekly meetings the students discussed their relationship with Christ and in more personal 'cabin' talks they discussed their adjustment to high school life and their plans for the future. Such challenges as the Ropes course made Windy Gap a memorable place but mudwrestling was an event not to be soon forgotten. However Sophs. usually limited their activities to cleaner sports such as ping-pong and pool. Christie Cameron and other Sophomores felt that, "Except for the long bus ride, the trip was real fun and I feel closer to my friends and God. I think we all want to come back next year."

Tired from the long bus ride these Sophs. find Windy Gap's lounge a warm haven.*

Taking time out from their movie, sophomores Stephanie Shouse, Jolyn Taggart, Rachel Blank, Robin Ruskiewicz, and Heather Hays order a pizza and share reports on the latest gossip.

Making Lemonade . . .

"What are we going to do tonight, guys?" This question was frequently asked on weekends and after school by sophomores and their friends. While seeing and being seen were the main elements of an ideal evening, often the sophomores discovered a brick wall blocking the pathways to paradise when a lack of transportation hindered their plans. On these luckless nights, when dreams of parties, late movies, or just hanging out on the town proved unattainable, ingenious sophomores turned their attention elsewhere.

Renting movies from places like the Video Show or Blockbuster Videos, students created their own fun sharing a pizza and watching their favorite films with their friends. Popular choices were Sixteen Candles, Ferris Bueller's Day Off, and Pretty In Pink. In this way, the sophomores took their lemons and made some great lemonade!

Warming up at the bar, Megan McCormick concentrates on preparing herself both mentally and physically for another rehearsal.

Reaping the Rewards

For sophomore Megan McCormick, years of practicing and striving for improvement have paid off! As a dancer, Megan has worked for six years to become the talented ballerina she is today. For the past two summers, she has received honor and recognition for her hard work.

Competing with dancers from all over the country, Megan auditioned for the School of American Ballet, and upon receiving her acceptance, she was off to New York for the summer. The program, which is one of the most prestigious in the country, lasted five weeks and consisted of continuous classes of classical ballet. The classes were strenuous and highly competitive, but for Megan, the opportunity to perform with many other talented dancers was worth the effort. Devoting all her time to improving her ballet skills, Megan took a giant leap towards achieving the unattainable goal of perfection.

Sophs Are Off to a Good Start!

"WHAT I DID THIS SUMMER . . ."

The last day of school begins the celebration of summer for students everywhere, but have you given any thought to what teachers do on their vacations? In truth, teachers do enjoy their vacations just as much as students do, if not more. High on the list of summer fun is the beach. First year science teacher Mr. France found time to "beach it" while finishing college. Mr. Dave Naffziger, math teacher and swim coach, returned to his home town for a two-week Swimming Guard Organization reunion.

The English department joined forces and took Europe by storm. As a group, they traveled to fourteen cities in seven countries by bus. "Most of the time was spent on the bus, but it was fun because we got to see snow in June-it was really amazing!" said Mrs. Ellen Witkowski. Regardless of how teachers behave in class, they do, in fact, do "normal" things over the summer.

A Touch of Class

Committed, demanding, talented, concerned, and motivated were words Mr. Daniel Compher's students used to describe him. Since the tenth grade Mr. Compher prepared for music to be a major part of his life. It hasn't been all glamour and glitz, but according to Compher, "this has been an extremely busy and eventful year." That is to say the least. To start off the year's events, Florida Commissioner of Education Betty Castor honored Compher and the Concert Chorus with an award for excellence, and directed the chorus in a song based on the Constitution. Mr. Compher and Concert Chorus were also featured in an article in the Tampa Tribune. The icing on the cake was the birth of Sarah Compher on October 21, 1987. When asked how Sarah's birth might have changed him Mr. Compher said, "I don't think the little problems bother me as much as they used to." Congratulations to Mr. Compher on his "eventful year."

Concentration is evident in the face of Mr. Compher as he directs Concert Chorus in one of their pieces.*

MOONLIGHTING UNDERWATER

After school, Mr. Ted Adams replaces his tie with an oxygen tank and his shoes with flippers. A teacher by day—a scuba diver by night, Mr. Adams actively engages in this sport and is willing to dive "even if it's in a mud puddle". If he can't be found at home or at school, chances are he's at the Cayman Islands, his favorite diving spot. Part of his diving experience includes viewing colorful fish and coral formations. Because his love and dedication to this sport is so strong, he encourages other people to share his affection. While teaching his students about marine life, he also includes scuba diving lessons. Every year his students go on field trips to places such as Crystal River and the Gulf of Mexico to experience life underwater. When asked what he feels when he emerses himself underwater, Mr. Adams exclaims, "It's the freest feeling I know."

Head of the Class

Who had a good "head" on its shoulders? Every academic department, that's who! Department heads not only ensured the smooth operation of each of their respective departments, but they also represented the department's views as a whole, and voiced these opinions during Steering Committee meetings. The thirteen chairmen met with Mr. Gatlin every two weeks to institute new policies concerning students, such as the rotation of split lunches. They also participated in the selection of new teachers and helped to decide in which specific section of their department these teachers would work. Mr. Gatlin felt that the department heads "were a vital link between teachers and the administration."

Mrs. Sarrett summed up the advantage of being a department head by saying, "While bureaucracy may be the nature of this beast called education, its vitality is in its philosophy, and being a department head can be rewarding when it shapes the direction of 'what' and 'how' people learn."

ADULT SERVICES: WHERE

would we be without them?

"It's the kids that make me love this job." remarked bus driver Ms Evelyn Goodwin. In fact, the common motivating force behind the custodial staff, lunchroom staff, and the bus drivers was a true affection of the student body.

The students relied on the bus drivers to get them to and from school on time despite traffic jams and other delays. These tensions usually would be unbearable, but, "it's not real work because the kids are so great.", exclaimed bus driver Jo Bolten. Each bus safely transported up to sixty students at once.

Due to an intense desire to please the student body, the custodial staff kept the halls and classrooms looking attractive and fixed any mechanical problems. Also, a big part of their job was to install and maintain the landscaping throughout the campus.

In an attempt to satisfy students, the lunchroom staff carefully planned and prepared nutritional meals. They patiently dealt with picky students who wanted the "best cookie". This can be trying at times but head lunchroom manager Ms Juanita Maggiacomo said, "I truly enjoy providing our kids with nutritional meals."

Without the help of this dedicated group our days would not have been as calm. These devoted adults kept everything running smoothly.

As she arrives at school, bus driver Ann Anderson opens the door to allow students to get off.*

NIGHT SCHOOL!

learning by moonlight

Thanks to Night School, adults who never learned to read and write had an opportunity to do so in the Literacy Program. "The Literacy Program was founded two years ago and has been a success ever since," commented Mr. Herman Fernandez, Assistant Principal for Adult and Community Education.

A variety of academic, vocational, and special interest classes were available. A unique program offered at Night School was the Adult Basic Education class for students who were mentally and physically disabled.

E.S.L., English as a Second Language, always had a variety of people in attendance during both semesters it was offered at Night School. Mrs. Juanita Yanes, an E.S.L. teacher, had students of twenty different nationalities in one class. "Language wasn't a barrier, as much as it was a common bond," said Mrs. Yanes.

Night School offered practical and educational skills to all members of the community. Chamberlain, the second night school established in the county, was the largest with a faculty of sixty-nine teachers and student enrollment at fifteen-hundred each semester.

"Shhh!!" This is the sound most frequently associated with the media center. While providing a quiet place for students to read and study, the media center also gave students a place to gather and relax during a hectic school day (as long as they were quiet). The media center specialists, Mrs. Liz Griffin, Ms. Kathy Jones, and Mrs. Alice Roberts, each having over seven years' experience in library science, provided students with books of both fact and fiction, all of which were carefully maintained. However, running the media center took more than just taking care of books. Organization was the key in budgeting funds, circulating materials, preparing bibliographies, and ordering audio visual equipment. But, the overall effect of a quiet atmosphere could be seen in the faces of all that enjoyed it. Students found the necessary materials for the many projects, reports, and research papers assigned throughout the year. Also, the media center specialists provided their skills to all students in need of help and assistaa e. Media specialist Ms. Kathy Jones, described the most fulfilling part of her job as "getting the right book in the hands of the right student at the right time makes it all worthwhile.

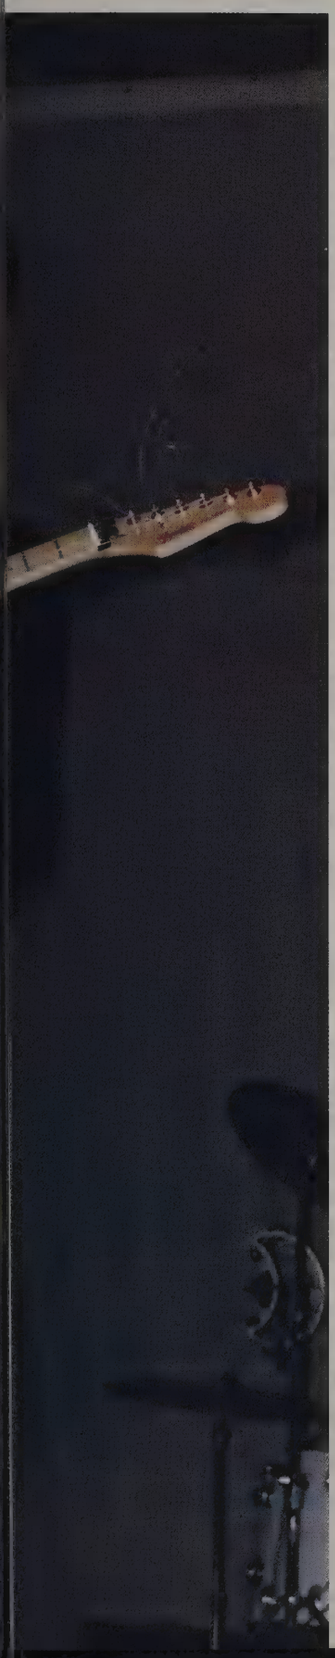
Everybody Have FUN Tonight



Fun — that was the name of the game. Whether it was during school, after school, or on the weekend, fun could be found anytime Chamberlain students were together. We worked, studied and practiced together, then to reward ourselves we danced, partied and played together.

We took pleasure in socializing with our friends in the six minutes passing time between classes and during lunch. Flirting with that great-looking person we each hoped to be "friends with" someday was another popular way to pass the time.

Every night we managed to put off our homework until we made those three crucial phone calls and watched all of our favorite TV shows. As a result, sleep, that basic necessity for life, became a luxury for most.

On special occasions, like the night before that big test, we invited our friends over for "study parties" that somehow evolved into gossip sessions or even a last minute trip to the movies.

The highlight of the week was always the weekend. Going to school-sponsored events like games, the dances that followed them, War Party and Talent Show always provided the opportunity to have fun. If there were no activities at the school we still found ways to have fun with friends. Having a date was nice, but those who did not had just as much fun, if not more, going to the "rockin' parties" found on every corner. We may not have found time to do every single homework assignment, but we always found time for fun.

WAR PARTY

Cowboys and Indians

Sounds of battle cries and pounding war drums echoed throughout the gym-teepee. Student Council President Amy Feir led the ceremony, as spirited Chiefs captured and scalped the unlucky cowboys in war dances performed by the administration, service clubs, and sophomore, junior, and senior classes.

Spirit points were awarded to the group who devised the most creative war dance. The winner was the senior class with their dance entitled, "Big Bad Chiefs!" Also, the Chiefettes raised money by applying war paint to the faces of spirited students.

An unconventional event, War Party replaced the traditional Pow-Wow before the Hillsborough game by arousing fighting spirit for the Gaither game. The theme of Indians vs. the Cowboys rallied students together to support their football team. At the end of the ceremony, the alma-mater was sung, bringing a touch of tradition into a different event.

PERSON

The age gap

Seniors, juniors, and sophomores, the three breeds of high school students, had distinguishing qualities.

Seniors, ready to graduate and get out into the real world, became impatient and tended to focus their energy on things other than school and their grades, a concept known as "Senioritis." Juniors, however, caught in the middle of the road, tended to keep on track with some involvement with seniors and sophomores alike. As they watched their older counter-parts, the sophomores also fit into the grueling high school life with their originality and ambition to be just like the seniors.

The dating game

Although it takes interaction between the two, girls and guys had similar and different ideas about dating.

The more casual attitude was chosen by the girls. They expressed their desires for short, unbinding, sometimes even multiple relationships. While most guys on the other hand took the more formal approach, and preferred long term relationships. Guys and girls agreed, however, on the statement that relationships were generally difficult but could be easy with the right person and a little work.

Girls and guys agreed on what to do on a date. The most common choice was dinner and a movie. The movie could be anything, and the dinner was usually at a place like Chili's, Fuddrucker's, or McDonald's. Due to a shortage of money the average high school student experienced, the second choice of going to a party became popular, but the main idea was to have fun.

TO PERSON

The "Laundation Sensation"

Respect seemed to go both ways between students and Frank Laundy. His students described him as "funny and easy-going" and "a good teacher who really understands kids' problems." Mr. Laundy, who has taught here for thirty years, commented that Chamberlain students are "intelligent and well-behaved, and they have a great deal of school spirit." This mutual respect led to a strong student-teacher relationship. As kids got to know him, they learned that Mr. Laundy was a person they could trust and a teacher who would always lend an ear and a helping hand.

The buddy system

The best of times spent with the best of friends: that's high school Whether they were two or three "best buddies" or a group of ten close friends, best friends were those special people with whom thoughts were shared and memories were made. Because best friends had much in common, they got along well with each other and had lots of good times together.

Girls and guys alike thought a best friend should be dependable and sensitive, someone who could always be counted on for an encouraging smile or a shoulder to cry on. Most of all, though, a best friend was fun to be around, a person to study with on school nights and to party with on weekends. Best friends stuck together during the good times and the bad, as they celebrated over good grades and kept each other company over those dateless Friday nights. Through thick and thin, they supported each other and managed to come out as closer friends, and as a result, many may stay best friends for life.

Assembly Highlights Homecoming Week

"The villagers looked for a chief — brave and strong — and a princess fit to rule with him," started the legend that was told at the Harvest Moon Assembly in honor of the court members. Earlier in the week, the senior class voted for these twenty senior guys and girls to represent their class and the school on the Homecoming Court. During the assembly, which was the highlight of the week before homecoming festivities, court members were announced and then performed the dance of the Green Corn.

Also promoting spirit during the week were the many colorful banners posted around school cheering the football team to victory Friday night against Leto. Anchor club's winning banner was chosen to be the one through which the football team charged excitedly onto the field. Throughout the week, there was an atmosphere of excited anticipation for the weekend's homecoming festivities.

Fans' Support Leads Team to victory

"Bag the Birds" exclaimed the Junior Class float winners. The Sophomores' banner proclaimed, "Wipeout the Falcons," while the Seniors boasted that "It Doesn't Take Much to Beat the Falcons," with their "generic" float at the homecoming game.

The dance of the Green Corn was again performed by the ten princesses of the homecoming court. This ritual dance was performed during halftime after the court members had been announced. During the pregame show, all the court members circled the track in their convertibles showing pride in being chosen to represent the Senior Class. The pregame and halftime festivities only added to the feelings of excitement and spirit in the stands as family, friends, and spirited students all gathered to show their support for the football team. In return, the team gave their audience a successful win over the Leto Falcons with a score of 21-6.

HARVEST MOON

Shine On, Harvest Moon!

It all started weeks ago. The planning, the search for a date, dress shopping and tux renting, reservations for dinner, tickets for the dance, and special curfew arrangements were details all settled in advance as the anxious couples awaited the big night. Then, as the couples arrived at the Busch Gardens Fest Haus on the night of the shining Harvest Moon, the evening began.

Soon the announcement of the new Highest Chief and Fairest Princess was at hand. As the ten Chiefs and Princesses assembled together, Chief Doug Miniati and Princess Sharon Chudnow were crowned to reign over the legendary tribe. Also honored were 4th runners up Erica Daugherty and Richard Short, 3rd runners up Nicole Mank and Steve Mazzie, 2nd runners up Michelle Cimino and Dan Agresti, and 1st runners up Ronda Mercer and Kenny Suarez.

The evening came to a close with many couples dancing late into the night. Others left to continue the festivities elsewhere with close friends, but for all who attended, the Harvest Moon shone a special light of fun and memories.

Park It

The Chamberlain parking lot, perhaps the most dangerous place students drive, hosted as many as four accidents in one week. From new to fast drivers, rear-enders and even totals were a common sight.

Other problems included a lack of space, and students leaving the lot in the afternoon. Those who arrived late found no spaces left, and simply made up their own spot. This "creative parking" blocked some cars from leaving and slowed down the entire exit procedure.

Let's Do Lunch

Due to the closure of campus, the bookstore had to be transformed into a concession stand at lunch. "Could I please have a ruler, a notebook, and a pizza to go?" was the phrase coming from many students. "Snack shacks" were set up around the school to ease overcrowding in the cafeteria. Chiefie dogs, hot pretzels, and Minute Maid orange drinks were some of the popular choices with students.

Because of the lack of seating, the administration was forced to set up bleachers around the school to accomodate extra students. The lunch situation began to improve with the opening of the "Chief Um Pa-Pa Deli". The deli offered a choice of eleven different kinds of sandwiches, as well as extras such as giant dill pickles and cole slaw. "The deli has made lunch a lot better," exclaimed junior Tammy Torrence. "The roast beef and pickles are the best." As the year passed students made the best out of the construction, but all were happy to see it end.

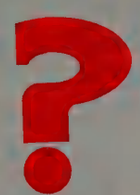
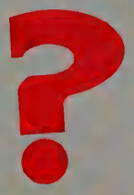
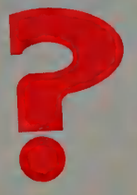
That in the 1960's students held a protest and instead of going to class they sat in front of the school.







TALENT SHOU

That's Entertainment!

From the crowd-pleasing jamming of "Mony-Mony," sung by Chad Rose and "Shattered Image," to the "Bang Bang" dancing of Wendy McCurdy, Senior Talent Show '88 entertained a full house. The large turnout meant a big audience and a lot of money — over three thousand dollars. The profits of the show, the only fundraiser of the senior class, were used to offset the cost of prom. The thirteen selected acts were chosen on the basis of merit and talent. Senior class sponsor Mrs. Cathy Taylor, MC's Sharon Chudnow and Kenny Suarez, and the other senior class officers discussed each individual tryout. The level of talent made eliminations difficult and Taylor commented that the show was "one of the most successful productions of the year." Adding to the success of the show were Key Club's serenading to the Kiwanettes with "You've Lost that Loving Feeling" and a "Wipe-Out" performance by the Splammies.

After Hours

Music For Money

It's 3:50; another working day be gins! Off to Fuddrucker's, McDonald's or Chili's, students strive to earn extra spending money. Sound familiar?

A common practice, the after schoo job, was modified by four creative guys who "shattered the image" of teenage employment. In their band Shattered Image lead singer Chad Rose, guitarist Steve Hawthorne, bass guitarist Jim Dumphord, and drummer Steve Bonner found a unique method of self-expression. Performing top 40 tunes and rock originals, Shattered Image kept crowds rocking at Talent Show, parties, and Chances teen club.

It Pays Off!

References, experience, labor, skills, learning responsibility, independence . . .

Yes, these are good reasons for teenage employment, but we all know what the real incentive is.

Working students sacrificed numerous hours of their free time to increase their cash flow. Employed at local record stores, restaurants, drug stores, or grocery stores, students found fascinating methods of obtaining spending money.

Although working schedules often conflicted with active social lives, employed students held an advantage over their unemployed friends. The extra money earned by these students enabled them to afford special events such as attending concerts and taking the senior cruise. In addition working students learned the jargon of teenage employment including the dreaded phrase "Sorry guys, I can't go out tonight; I have to work."

Places To Go

The Good Times!

There's more than meets the eye. Look beyond the academic exterior of the student in the classroom. Where does he go when the final bell rings?

Out on the town students found good times at popular hangouts such as Stars, McDonald's, Chili's, and Wag's. In search of fun and friends, students also gathered at football games, shopping malls, and parties to release the stress caused by jobs and school work. The remaining hours were spent in pursuit of personal interests like dancing, shopping, participating in sports, catching a few rays at the beach, or just watching a movie. Balancing the time between entertainment and responsibilities, the student always managed to let the good times roll.

Sounds familiar, huh? Our days were filled with 350 minutes of WEPs, labs, math problems, history dates, formulas, and translations. Some of us were lucky enough to be able to relax and catch up in study hall or run and play in P. E.

But no matter which classes we enrolled in, we were there to learn. The learning was made easier and more interesting through the knowledgeable instruction of our teachers and the dedication of our administrators.

HEAD CHIEF
GATLIN PRESENTS

Many Faces In School and Out

"Good morning all you loyal chiefs chiefies, or whatever the case may be." Mr. James Gatlin did his part to keep students' attention. But his job as principal involved more responsibility and leadership.

An innovator in education, Mr. Gatlin initiated two new programs to advance both teaching and learning. A special teacher-in-service program trained department heads. Through a peer-coaching technique, a team of educators met and discussed how teaching methods could be improved. Then they presented their ideas to the teacher in a non-threatening way.

Another new dimension was the creation of academic boosters. Mr. Gatlin hoped to "project the academic thrust into the fore." His goal was to give academic excellence as much support as extracurricular activities. Members began by recognizing honor roll students and by planning an honors banquet.

Mr. Gatlin's philosophy was summed up in a few words: "Kids will do what you allow them to, if you give them a fair shake."

ASSISTANT PRINCIPALS

Setting the Standards

"We've set the standard, now it's up to you", said Dr. John Sessums, Assistant Principal of Student affairs. "We have tried to give our students a fair but firm opportunity when it came to discipline. "My job required a tremendous amount of patience not just in discipline but in many other areas, such as, taking care of all club functions, attendance and the busy school calendar." Dr. Sessums was not the only one who had his hands full; but with managing all non-instructional personnel, inventory of supplies and coordinated athletic events, Mr. Danny Riviero, Assistant Principal of Administration had a busy year. As so did Assistant Principal of Curriculum, Jean Chambliss. Her duties encompassed a wide range of responsibilities from supervision of the guidance department to the selection of classes for students. This obligation was also a part of the job for Mr. Herman Fernandez, Assistant Principal for Adult Education. In other words the duties of these assistant principals covered all aspects of student life from athletics to management to schedules.

ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL II's

Are the Corner Stone of CHS.

"Get to class, you're going to be late." Most students heard this at one time or another as Mrs. Mosteller, Mr. Rao, and Dr. Brown monitored the halls between classes. Yet the job of the Assistant Principals, previously known as deans, was more involved than just hall monitoring. Dean Brown, who worked with the school system for 38 years and served as a dean at Chamberlain for 15 years knew this best.

Since 1973, when he first became a dean, Dr. Brown has seen the office of Student Affairs become busier as its responsibilities increased. This year the deans had to sign in and check out students, excuse absences, and approve field trips. Most important, they took disciplinary actions against referred students. Deans were also busy outside the office checking the student parking lot during school and monitoring the buses before and after school.

Dean Brown, who retired in January, said that his leaving made the job of Assistant Principals Mosteller and Rao more hectic, but they took this increase in stride.

RENOVATION ADDS BEAUTY

Stability Adds Comfort

Have you ever wondered how many credits you need to graduate? How about the next time the SAT will be given? All these questions and more have been answered by the guidance counselors. The main goal of the counselors was to provide assistance to students regarding grades, scholarships, and colleges. They met this need by sponsoring college night and by inviting representatives from colleges to provide direct information to students. In addition, the guidance staff also purchased computer programs containing financial aid and scholarship information to aid students in selecting colleges. Counselors also helped students who were in need of academic assistance. Students having any problems with their classes could be assigned a tutor to help them in any subject. These extra efforts allowed students to realize that there was never a reason to panic, help was always near.

With the addition of a new guidance wing and new members, the staff continued to improve. The extra space and warm atmosphere enhanced the comfort of approaching the office. When one left the office they left their problems there too, for they could always be assured that everything was under control.

THE MAIN EVENT: NEVER A Dull Moment

"Hectic!" is the word the main office secretaries used to describe their normal day. Typing, answering phone calls, finding substitute teachers, and helping faculty and students were just some of the things that kept the secretaries busy. Two C. H. S. alumni worked in main office; Mrs. Diana Vierday and Mrs. Ellie Carter were both personal secretaries to Mr. Gatlin and Mr. Riviero. Mrs. Carter expressed that the most rewarding part of her job was "The daily contact with the students. It makes the job less tiresome." The tradition of school spirit was the most enjoyable aspect of working in the main office for Mrs. Vierday. As Mr. Gatlin's personal secretary Mrs. Vierday felt that "Once you get that green and gold blood in your veins you can't get it out!" This sentiment was also voiced by the other secretaries who felt that working with students was a plus of working in a school environment. School bookkeeper, Mrs. O'Berry instructed the student treasurers of the clubs and classes to keep accurate accounts. Ms. Kilbride, the data processing clerk, accomplished the processing of roll call sheets, schedules, and report cards, and did wonders for school spirit by printing the "Congratulations on making the Honor Roll" on report cards.

STUDENTS AND BOOSTERS

"Peer 1 has made me a better person. It has helped me deal with people and their problems," said member Alison Knott. This is the attitude of Peer 1 students. This was a class to help the students with everyday issues as well as to plan Student Council events. Peer 1 students learned how to recognize other's problems and how to help them deal with these problems. When they weren't working towards making themselves better people, they were eagerly working on Student Council events such as homecoming, War Party, and assemblies. "We all work together as a team and try to help one another,"; commented Alison Knott.

Credit for many Athletic facility improvements went to the Athletic Boosters. Members raised money through the sale of T-shirts, tickets to post football game dances, and through earnings from the concession stand. The proceeds were used to expand the weight room and fence the baseball field. Boosters were also responsible for athletic banquets, trophies, and medallions. THE A.P. DIFFERENCE:

Challenging and Rewarding

Two whole hours for one high school class? Sounds more like college, you say. That's exactly what the A.P. program provided—a chance to earn college credit in high school.

Although A.P. Biology and A.P. Physics classes taught by Mrs. Susan O'Brien and Mr. John Ferron respectively, were two periods of the day, not all A.P. classes were that long. Similiar to regular fifty minute courses were Advance Placement English, calculus, American History, and European History. Yet the course work went beyond "regular" expectations.

Students who enrolled in the A.P. program were "directed to teach themselves", stated European History teacher Ms. Susan Bittmann. Students had a strong academic background and participated in reading college-level texts.

The reward came in May, where students had the chance to earn college credit. They took a test, which covered the entire year's material. The student had to score a three, four or a five out of a possible five. If these scores were obtained, the amount of credit varied from university to university.

Throughout the year, the A.P. students were challenged to complete complicated lab work, college-level essays, and creative projects.

DOUBLE TIME DONE

for College Credit

Earning twice the credits in half the time was the purpose of Dual Enrollment classes. The program gave students the opportunity to earn college credit while taking courses in high school. There were three Dual Enrollment classes offered. Political Science, taught by Mr. Frank Laundy, gave students a better understanding of the way politics worked and helped them form opinions on national events. In Mr. Joseph Alfonso's classes Personal Growth and Development and Career Decisions, students learned more by creative thoughts than by purely intellectual ones. Mrs. Betty Watson's classes, College Reading one and two, students improved their reading skills through practice. The College Reading students also learned by listening to instructional tapes through headphones.

A Political Science student, Dana Murray, said, "I have gained a better understanding of political ideology and theory much better now." She said the class would help her in college social science classes. According to Mr. Alfonso Dual Enrollment is "a way to the future. they are a definite advantage."

PROGRAMS DIVERSIFY AND

Student Action Increases

There's no escape! No matter who you were, or what year you graduated, every student was required to become involved with the English Department. There was an English class designed for every student. These included the separate sophomore, junior, and senior classes which ranged from basic English to English Honors. Advanced Placement, a special class offered to Seniors only, enabled students to receive college credit in English. There was even an English class offered to those students who were learning English as a second language.

However, this department did not just teach English classes. According to Mrs. Sylvia Sarrett, "The CHS English Department thrives on diversity." Many classes such as drama, debate, and journalism were taught under the administrators of this department. Many students participated in these courses and found that they gained great satisfaction from the completion and mastery of them. Stacey Krout, a participant in the drama program for three years, found that she "gained a lot of self-confidence and found it easier to become more open with people."

The instructors in the English Department associated well with their students and cooperated well with each other, too. "All of the teachers are very friendly. We are a compatible mix of personalities working toward the same goals. We all care very much," the positive response given by Mrs. Sarrett, reflecting the department.

ENJOYABLE?
MATH TEACHERS

try making math less confusing

Quadratic equations? Trigonometric functions? Ugh! Most people dread going to math class, but our math department tried to ease the pain as much as it could. Besides the regular classes normally offered, a Math Analysis course was added as a review before Calculus. Scholastic Aptitude Test skills were also included in each class's curriculum to help students raise their scores. Teachers were helpful by putting in their time for tutoring and explaining the difficult theorems and equations to confused students. Department Head Ms. Patricia Lantis stated, "We understand that math is a hard subject, so the teachers are always ready to provide instruction and help."

For those few talented students that understand those difficult theorems and equations, Mrs. Mary Whitten began giving the American Scholastic Math Association test. These six timed-tests consisted of seven questions covering all levels of math. The National Math League tests, which are similar to the ASMA tests except broken into different levels, were given second semester. One test-taker, Marc Sacks, says, "The test is a chance for friendly competition." Overall, the math department worked to make match a little less confusing, and more enjoyable.

SOCIAL STUDIES: NOT A

Thing of the Past, It's Now!

"Human relations; that is what Social Studies is all about," boasted Department Head Mr. Frank Laundy. Whether it be Psychology, Law Studies or history, people, past and present, were the focus of Social Studies in general. For students who wished to learn more about themselves, Psychology was the answer. "Psychology gives me a chance to experience myself as an individual," commented junior Kim Swan. For those interested in learning about the criminal justice system, Law Studies was the key. Students experienced court room dramas and the various aspects of law. Law students also visited the Hillsborough County Correctional Institute to view prison from an inmate's point of view.

Besides such interesting electives, students were required to take such courses as World History and American History. For those students interested in gaining college credit, the Social Studies department offered such courses as Advanced Placement American History and European History as well as Dual enrollment Political Science.

Just as history is a melting pot of different cultures and people, the Social Studies department was a melting pot of different courses and electives.

SCIENCE INTERESTS INCREASE

added benefits aid all

Cells, cells, and more cells! Being composed of billions of cells, it is no wonder that both students and teachers alike had such an avid interest in the sciences. Participating in many scientific activities gave everyone involved in the science department a better understanding of their field of interest. The major fall activity was the Science Olympics. Students entered the categories of bridge building, egg drop and fermi questions. In the spring some students competed in the Science Fair. Categories consisted of botany, chemistry, and physics. In addition, science enthusiasts built their own greenhouse. Their efforts paid off in the form of polished plant skills and various colored flowers.

Along with new teachers, the science department also received a new course. The option of taking AP physics was available for those interested in thermodynamics. Because the department met the requirements regarding the amount of hours spent on labs, an extended budget was granted. This money was spent on microscopes and balances. The combination of new activities and equipment allowed everyone involved in the science department to have greater depth, insight and perception when studying a branch of science.

GERMAN AND SPANISH THE

best of both worlds!

Why do they do it? Could there possibly be more to foreign language classes than a requirement for graduation? Although some students found the concept of life after foreign language hard to believe, many were pleasantly surprised to find interesting and useful knowledge presented in enjoyable classes like German and Spanish.

In today's society, knowledge of a foreign language is very important for people who are interested in certain fields of employment or for those who are residents of areas having a strong cultural influence. These are common reasons why students chose German or Spanish as their foreign language study. As stated by senior Craig Joyner, "German is a practical choice for me because it will be especially helpful in my career goal of being an architect." Likewise, Spanish was a practical course due to the strong Latin influence in American culture.

Making learning fun, German and Spanish enabled students to increase cultural awareness through participation in Declamations and International Night. These programs allowed students to creatively use their knowledge. Such involvement provided enthusiasm for culture, and the dreaded requirement was feared no more!

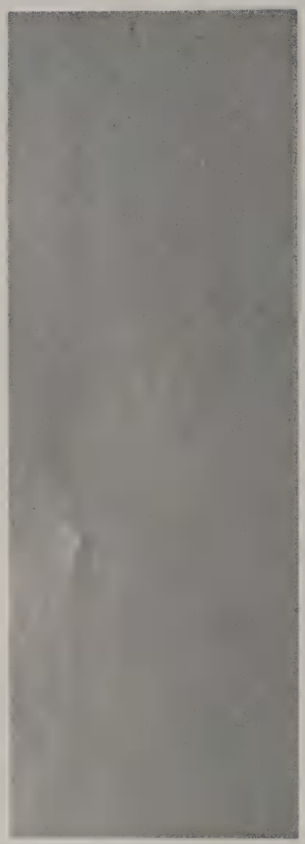
FRENCH AND LATIN



teachers import experience

First-hand experience made first-rate French teachers. Ms. Scott, who grew up in France, and Ms. Fevrier, who lived in Montreal, Canada, put their French backgrounds to use in the classroom. They taught students to read, write, speak, and understand French. Students also learned about culture as they studied French food, fashion, art, and history. During the year, French classes took field trips to plays, cafes, and to EPCOT's France. According to Ms. Fevrier, learning French gave students "an overall understanding of other cultures and a better understanding of the English language."

Miss Ellen Lamb, a Latin and Education major from Syracuse University, brought experience into her classroom, too. She taught her Latin classes to read and write in Latin and introduced them to Roman history, social customs, literature, and art. Miss Lamb thought that Latin helped students most by "improving their spelling and increasing their English vocabulary."

A new addition to the Latin and French classrooms was the Language Lab, where students learned as they listened to tapes made by the teacher. According to Junior Marc Sacks, the lab was "a fun way to listen and learn Latin."

halls" with color

The Art Department really showed its true colors when they decorated the newly remodeled halls at Christmas. Delicate "stained glass" windows, made out of construction paper and brightly colored tissue paper, decked the halls in yuletide spirit. As well as adding color to the holiday season, art students continued their regular class activities. First-year students were taught the basics of design. Projects included pottery, sketching, drawing, and painting with water colors. Second-year art students learned different techniques and developed their own style. Art III was offered for students who were considering a career in design.

As well as general art classes, special interest classes were offered. Ceramics classes and Painting I and II focused on individual styles and views. All classes offered by the Art Department were strictly instructional. "You're not graded on the end result, it's your ability and effort that counts," said junior Shannon Spurlock. Art teacher James Nemeth commented, "Our goal is to provide a stable basis for students to develop artistic skills."

PHYSICAL FITNESS

means fun in the sun

"Oh no! today we have to run the mile in P.E.!" This was a familiar quote of many students enrolled in physical education classes. Although these athletes dreaded the physical fitness test, they knew it ultimately benefited them and helped to keep them in shape. Among the various tests were the sit-ups, pull-ups, and flexibility tests and also the well-known timed mile. Students always strove to do their best, as a common question among friends was "What was your time?"

As well as stressing physical fitness, including cardiovascular fitness, endurance and strength, P.E. coaches also focused on athletic skills. Eager students were given hands-on instruction and were taught valuable skills in their chosen sport. Sometimes a coach might even join his students, as Coach Aplin did, in a friendly game of kick-ball. As well as coaching students in athletic skills, coaches also taught athletes the rules of each sport, and provided them with an historical background of it.

Besides learning about physical fitness and staying in shape, students also had a good time in P.E. class. "I love volleyball class because it's a great break from the classroom and a lot of fun, too!" commented senior Darren Masters.

WORKING WITH THE Future is a Treat For Students

"Trick or Treat!" rang through the halls as the Child Care children dressed up in search of candy. This was a surprise for some students who did not know Child Care existed. Some thought it was a babysitting job for school credit. Actually it taught the students how to relate and teach pre-school children.

The students who took Child Care had to learn the procedures of a daycare business. They took the class for a three hour block, learning the basics of lesson plans, nutrition, discipline, and other skills. Monday and Friday they had class, and Tuesday through Thursday they received experience by working with the community children. If a child needed a haircut the students of cosmetology were ready.

Cosmetology taught its students the techniques of a beauty salon. The learning did not stop with haircutting, as manicuring, facials, and proper store sanitation were also covered in the course. Cosmetology students had a three hour block, in both their junior and senior years. Monday and Tuesday the students worked from texts learning the reasons behind the techniques. Wednesday through Friday they were in the shop, juniors working on mannequins, and seniors working on customers. The money raised was reinvested into supplies.

Cosmetology and Child Care were similar subjects. Each showed that by learning a subject you enjoy you are not only helping the community, but also preparing yourself for a future career.

EXPERIENCE LENDS TO

success in life

"Stop the car! This statement could be heard on one of the most dangerous areas of the school grounds— the driver's education range. Students cited different reasons for taking driver's ed. Some said they needed to learn traffic rules while others signed up because of the advantage driver's ed offers— the chance to take the driver's examination at school instead of the driver's license office. Students who successfully passed the exam obtained a "waiver" that enabled them to receive their operators license. This was not always easy, however. Students were required to do book work and take tests in addition to the driver's examination. White knuckles were sometimes seen while students drove with the teacher. But many agreed that all of the work necessary to receive the "waiver" was worth it.

While cars weaved around the range, home ec students could be seen using a range for a different purpose — to cook foods such as pizza and lasagna. The purpose of classes such as food nutrition and child care is to instruct students in necessary activities that they will need after high school.

THE MANY DIFFERENT

faces of DEES

"The DEES Program was very rewarding to both the students and to myself," said teacher Nicky Goldberg, who worked with the physically handicapped students. Mr. Dave Mariotti, Department Head, and Mrs. Cora Lochridge, also worked with physically handicapped students. There were four departments in the DEES program. These departments consisted of: Physically Handicapped, Hearing Impaired, Specific Learning Disabilities, and Emotionally Handicapped. These students were "mainstream" students, which meant they attended regular classes as well as special classes.

The Hearing Impaired Department was run by Mrs. Elizibeth Ellis, Mrs. Sylvia Fagio, and Mrs. Cynthia Haunsell. Students who were eager to learn but could not hear their teachers were assigned language interpreters. These interpreters attended classes regularly with the students to interpret in sign language for the students. The Specific Learning Disabilities Department was taught by Mrs. Denise Manway and Mrs. Julie Owens.

Mrs. Mary Francis Luysterbueg taught The Emotionally Handicapped Department. These students were also mainstream students. These teachers were specialists in their department areas. "We see ourselves as a dynamic and innovative department," said Mariotti.

SPECIAL PROGRAMS

strive for success

The Department of Education for Exceptional Students, DEES, provided an atmosphere of a one-on-one basis for exceptional students and prepared them for the mainstream environment. DEES encompassed five separate facets for these students: Physically Handicapped, Educable Mentally Handicapped, Specific Learning Disabilities and Hearing Impaired Division. DEES made new innovations with the acceptance of two new pilot programs. One technique made modifications in curriculum by offering new vocational education classes through the Varying Exceptionalities study course titles which include Home Economics, Agriculture, Industrial Arts and Employability Skills. DEES' other pilot program was a system developed for ESE teachers and regular teacher can work together using a written format to improve the mainstreaming opportunities for high achieving ESE students. This technique was known as Cooperative Consultations.

David Mariotti, Department Head for DEES, said that our division had made tremendous strives and fulfilled the needs of the exceptional students.

IT PAYS TO BE INDUSTRIOUS

Woodn't You Agree?!

Industry is growing faster than ever and our students learned how to compete and become a success in this field. Students had the chance to learn about areas such as Wood and Plastic Shop, Metal Shop, and Drafting. These classes gave the students a varied education in the mechanics of industry.

Mr. Ronald Tucker, who has been teaching Wood and Plastic Shop for the past twenty-two years, was very excited over the success and en couragement of these Industrial Arts. Mr. Tucker was impressed by the various students who were attracted to his class, especially the girls and exceptional education students. "Girls," he stated, "seem to be far more interested in industry these days, as compared to ten years ago." Mr. Tucker also noted that, "This was the first year I've had an exceptional ed. class," and he expressed his approval to the allowing of these students to become involved with school activities.

These Industrial Arts classes demonstrated the flexibility and practicality of the county's electives. Senior Eric Sproles stated, "Industrial arts is more than a class to me. It's more like an opportunity for me to work on my hobbies and to have fun at school with my hands." Among some of the best accomplishments were a fiberglass boat and numerous awards from the county fair in May.

Teaming Up For Victory

Dedication, commitment, drive, cooperation, and a competitive spirit were the characteristics of the Chamberlain athlete. Rain or shine, we practiced diligently every day after school in preparation for the upcoming games, meets, and matches.

We pushed ourselves to the limit and encouraged our teammates to do the same, and the hard work payed off. Whether we won or lost, we were satisfied with our performances because we had put forth our best effort. Through painful injuries, wrenching losses, and joyous victories, we personified the true meaning of a team.

Being a member of a team meant working together for common "goals" and encouraging each other to excel. This cooperation and support inspired closeness among teammates and coaches that resulted in a rewarding season — no matter what went down in the record books.

Varsity Chiefs On The War Path

Coach Billy Turner

They passed, kicked, and scored their way to a successful season. The varsity football team, under the leadership of longtime head Coach Billy Turner, had a winning season due to teamwork and pride among the players and coaches.

The team, guided by quarterbacks Kelly Moore and J. J. Gee, held together through the trials and triumphs of the season. They began the season with a 17-7 win over the Plant Panthers, a victory that inspired the team to keep on fighting throughout the rough season. Even after a 2-7 loss to archrivals, the Gaither Cowboys, the players were able to make a strong comeback when they defeated the state-ranked Plant City Raiders 19-10.

Rigorous practices were held Mondays thru Thursdays to strengthen muscles and perfect plays. Beginning the week with the hardest practices; drills, exercises, and running laps, and closing the week with the perfecting of plays in preparation for the Friday night game. In addition to the daily afternoon practices, the team met in the mornings before school to work out on weights for body conditioning purposes. Coach Turner explained that their strategies were: playing a good solid defense, having a balanced offensive attack, and working on all aspects of the kicking game. By drilling the team on these three areas of the game, the coaches drove the team to success.

Individual accomplishments were not the main focus of the team. Instead they served to bring the players together as a whole. There was not one individual who stood out in the crowd; but rather, the team combined all their efforts to become a successful team. All season the players encouraged one another to fulfill their potential. Junior Jason Holeman reinforced this idea when he said, "The one thing that separates us and raises us above other schools is teamwork. There is an irreplaceable closeness among the players."

Kicking off to a Winning Season

Coach Billy Turner

What was the hottest thing to do on Friday nights during the months of September, October and November? The football game! Loyal Chief fans were attracted to the stadiums to cheer on the Chiefs and to socialize and have fun with friends. The cheering fans were rarely disappointed with the Chiefs' performance. The hard-working, dedicated players formed a strong team due to many strenuous hours of practice in the off-season and powerful senior leadership. According to Coach Billy Turner, exceptional players included Jerome Hodges, Ken Thomas, Lloyd Black, Eric Hunt, Ben Zeigler, Chanse Jones, Doug Joseph, Ken Newton, Kelly Moore, Shawn Rodriguez, and Fred Godfrey.

The Fighting Chiefs' main goal during the season was to make it to District and Conference Championships. They kicked off to a winning start by beating Plant. King, Armwood, Leto, and the seventh ranked team in the state — Plant City. Coach Turner considered this to be a major accomplishment for the Fighting Chiefs, as Plant City was considered to be "the team to beat" in the County. Although the Chiefs endured the toughest schedule in Hillsborough County, with no guaranteed wins, they pulled through and emerged triumphant due to their determination. Working together as a whole, the solid defense and the quick offensive attack proved to be a winning strategy. Senior Clint Harrell complimented the team's unity by saying, "We really work well as a team — the experienced seniors led the less experienced, but very determined juniors."

Their victorious standing could be attributed to their dedication, hard work and unity; but the team's attitude was what really made the difference. Juniors John Floto and Chris Groves agreed that the team's expectations were high, and that a positive attitude was the key to their success. "They are tough on the field, but gentlemen to work with," commented Coach Turner.

Love Ya Baby-baby
Come over sometime over the summer. ;)

Dear Lizz,
Wow! What a year - it's gone by so fast but it's been so fun! I'm glad we got to be good friends this year. You're such a sweet girl and I really enjoyed seeing your smiling face every morning. Thanks for all the advice. Remember Folk dancing, Vest size story, meeting in the library, riding the bus, etc. Stay sweet and have an awesome summer.

No Pain, No Gain

Coach Max Risler

Being a JV football player isn't easy. Some would say that it was more difficult than being on the varsity team. JV players have to endure long hours of practice, day after day, even though they only play six games all year. These six games very rarely get a great turn out, but persistence and a love for football keep these players going.

For the past two years Coach Max Risler has been making winners and molding varsity players out of the JV team members. Risler strove for an offense with an effective running game and efficient receivers. He also tried to create a defense that halted their opponents and caused turn-overs. To achieve these goals Coach Risler had the team endure hours of calisthenics, running and special training for the linemen and backs.

For two and half months this group practiced together, learning new plays and learning how to function as a unit. Daniel Minich noted that, "JV football is a lot of hard work, but it's really worth it in the long run." Dustin Horne stated that, "The hard practices together help us form a kind of bond. We're kind of like a big family." This feeling of camaraderie and accomplishment are what Coach Risler tries to instill in his players. This won't only help them on the field, it will help them to better deal with life. The JV players learn that through determination and responsibility they can become successful.

This year's 6-0 record proved how capable and effective the JV team really was. Wins over such teams as Gaither, Leto, and Hillsborough impressed Coach Risler and the entire student body. Risler stated, "These boys have a chemistry that allows them to work well together and to win together." The JV team proved that they were tough enough to face and defeat their opponents without hundreds of fans cheering them on.

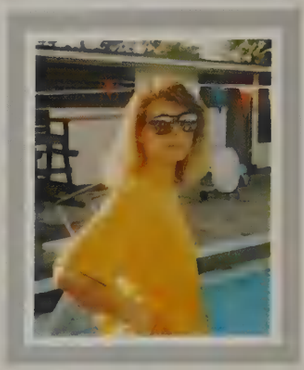
Girls' Swimming Strokes to Success



Coach Lee Springmeier

With full force the girls' swim team splashed into another victorious season. A new coach, Lee Springmeier, was welcomed to work with the experienced Coach Dave Naffziger. "Coach Springmeier contributed a fresh spirit that created a greater team unity," commented Coach Dave Naffziger. With almost thirty girls on the team, the Lady Chiefs set out to seize the available championship titles.

Girls' Swimming retained their City Relays title, winning the meet for the sixth year in a row. This season the girls had hoped to regain the Western Conference title. Unfortunately, the Lady Chiefs were disappointed when they fell nine points short and had to settle for the runner-up spot again to the Brandon Eagles. Trying to reverse the order of finish, they worked extremely hard toward the District Meet. The season was completed by the girls striving to place high in the State Meet.

Among these championship quests were ten Dual Meets and one Tri Meet in which the Lady Chiefs had little trouble establishing themselves as the team to beat. Victory was easily achieved with the experience of returning swimmers Pam Wilson, Marie Smith, Meg Phelan, and Tammy Woeckner. The team was strengthened with the added bonus of several outstanding sophomores such as Erin Allison and Christie Cameron.

Adding up to a busy season were many victories, pre-meet pasta parties, seat gathering for Dean Rao at Tampa Stadium, secret buddies, cold pools, and long, noisy bus rides.

"Swimming is a very strenuous sport and it takes a great deal of will power. But between the hard work, there are fun times and our spirit brings us closer together. It is really worth all the time and effort you put into swimming," commented senior swimmers Ericka Kossen and Susan Kern.

Supporting A Winning Tradition

Coach Dave Naffziger

One and a half hours of watching a black line on the bottom of a pool does not sound very exciting. Swimming two to two and a half miles a day watching that line is what it took to be on the swim team. Swimming was more than that, however. Swimming meant winning. The Boys' Swim Team won the Western Conference and the City Relays for the last six years in addition to several district titles. That was the swimming tradition which motivated the swimmers to keep on winning.

Coach Lee Springmeier joined Coach Dave Naffziger in guiding the team toward maintaining this tradition. After victories in the City Relays and Conference, the team looked forward to District and trying to regain their title. When the district meet was over, the swimmers headed for the state meet both physically and mentally prepared. The boys had trained strenuously to get in shape, and went to the state meet with optimistic attitudes.

Examples of leadership were set by seniors Jimmy Butler and Mike Kenny and junior Jeff Feldman. All three of these swimmers captured Western Conference titles to make the All-Conference team. Placing individually at the State Meet was a sought-after goal set by the boys. Newcomers who helped the team keep its tradition were Kevin Kenny, Roger Shaw, and Mike Meyer.

Coach Naffziger commented, "In the seven years I've been coaching, we've only lost four dual meets. No other sport has ever had that kind of consistency when it comes to winning." Facing such tough competitors such as Gaither, Jesuit, and Brandon, the boys used each ninety minute practice to train and prepare for such meets. "With all this talent, we all help support our reputation of being winners," confidently stated senior Mike Kenny.

Girls set up for victory

Megan Wheeler

Beating the odds and their opponents led the volleyball team to a winning season. With a new coach and only three seniors, the team looked forward to many tough matches. In order to build a strong foundation early, the girls began intense conditioning exercises and practiced basic playing techniques before the start of the school year. Always stressing the importance of accuracy, first year coach Megan Wheeler demanded consistency and precision from her players. According to Wheeler, "If the girls can control the ball, then they can control their opponents and win the games."

As the season progressed, outstanding team members led to the rapid improvement of the young team. Luanne Baldwin dominated plays at the net, and Donna Reefe, who worked as the team's main setter, set up many successful offensive plays. Coach Wheeler stated that Senior Alicia Weigel was "the best all-around player" because she provided strong offensive hits and dinks and successful defensive blocks and passes. Sophomore Jerrie Milner also saw a lot of playing time as a starting setter for the team.

Out on the court, the team's abilities were put to the test, and each player had to perform at top level. All of the playing strategies and the individual talents had to work together to form a team unity. Coming on strong in the first match of the season, the team was victorious, winning both games against Bloomingdale and East Bay. After losing tough matches to King and Armwood, the girls worked hard in practice to learn new offensive plays and a more versatile defense. With these improvements, the team pulled together to beat its rivals, Plant and Gaither. Their teamwork continued to give the girls a winning edge and a winning record. Coach Wheeler, pleased with her team's performance, commented, "This is the best team I've ever coached."

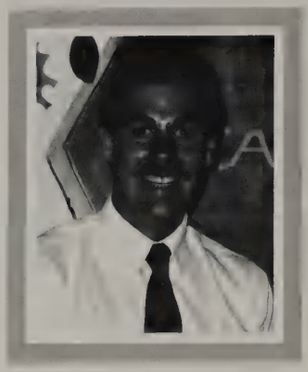
Motivation Starts it All



Coach Doug Stone

Unity and team motivation were the keys to a stronger and more hopeful season for both the boys' and the girls' cross country teams.

After finishing seventh in the district and sixth in the conference the previous season, the boys' cross country team, under the leadership of Coach Doug Stone, set their hopes on a better season. With the help of strong captains, Doug Miniati, Malcolm Manning, and Mike Silah, Coach Stone's philosophy of unity within a team paid off with victories in the West Hillsborough Invitational, the Armwood Invitational, and the Gaither Run. These victories strengthened the team's motivation to meet their goals and to train harder. Their training was based on volume and intensity and included practices at 7:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m. at locations in the area and at St. Leo College. Members of the team include Justin Luke, ranked fifth in the conference, Doug Miniati, ranked fifteenth in the county, Richard Marsh, Tim Lester, and Tony McClendon.

The girls' cross country team also concentrated on motivation during their season. Sheryl Lewis, coach of the girls' team, believed positive motivation before, during and after competitions strengthened the team's position and prepared them for the race at hand or for a future race. Another strong force behind the injury-plagued team was the consistency offered by co-captain Christianna Rininger, who was the team's top runner for the past two seasons. Coach Lewis emphasized the use of weight lifting during the season to build needed muscles.

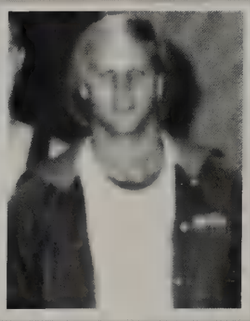
Discipline Strengthens Team



Coach Dave Nelson

Although the boys' wrestling team was a young one, first year coach Dave Nelson had high expectations for his team: "Our goal is to win district and get as many kids to state as possible." He planned to meet this goal with discipline and hard work. To practice, at first the team met six days a week for three hours each day. Later in the season, their practice schedule was upped to two practices a day — conditioning in the morning and workouts in the afternoon. These practices were needed not only to keep everyone in first-rate condition, but also to give the first year wrestlers a chance to learn strategy. With the discipline provided by Coach Nelson the team was shaped into a top competitor in the district. Although he was new to the Chief Wrestling program, Coach Nelson had six years of experience as a wrestling coach to back up the team as they hoped to improve on last year's record of six wins and five losses. They started off impressively with a decisive win at their first match against their long-standing rival, the Leto Falcons. Continuing to win, the team's enthusiasm and skill grew throughout the season as they boasted a strong winning record. After the regular season was completed with a successful record, several wrestlers qualified to compete at District and State levels. Top returnees Ben Holder, Les Diaz, Joe Minardi, and William Howe each performed well in key matches as did many of the newer members of the team. Besides experience, an important part of a successful wrestling team is aggressiveness and that was one of the Chief wrestlers' strong points: "We have a lot of good agressive guys," stated Coach Nelson. His discipline and strategy paid off for the team as they worked hard and were rewarded by a winning year in district competition.

Girls Shoot for Success!

Coach Betty Lambert

Fired-up for a new season, Girls' Varsity Basketball was ready to rebuild its team. Because of graduation the team lost four starters. In addition, Alicia Weigel, the only returning starter was injured early in the season and was unable to play for about two months.

With such an important player out for most of the season, Coach Betty Lambert worked to overcome the inexperience of her team. "We are a young team that will develop into a mature team with each game we play. Their young mistakes will eventually dwindle with more experience in game situations and more practice," commented Coach Betty Lambert.

Every day for one and a half to two and a half hours, Girls' Varsity Basketball worked to perfect skills such as passing, dribbling, and free throwing. The girls also learned certain offensive plays and complex defensive tactics that could be used to their advantage during games.

Possessing the desire and determination to improve, the Lady Chiefs practiced for strong defensive games with a great deal of hustle. Before a game the girls watched video tapes from previous games which enabled them to correct their mistakes. Girls' Varsity Basketball used quick action to gain possession of the ball. Then, making a fast break to their basket, the Lady Chiefs easily added two points to their score. These strategies helped the girls to strengthen their ability as a team and overcome inexperience.

Meria McBride, a Junior and two year varsity member, stepped in as the team leader with the assistance of Natalie Butler and Jennifer Sims. Together, they pulled the team through its rebuilding season. The Lady Chiefs' improvement gave Coach Lambert and the team members hope for the future of Girls' Varsity Basketball.

New Talents Show Great Performance

Coach Doug Aplin

The 1986-87 basketball season said farewell to a team of record players and runner-up standing with their 17 and 8 finish and placing in the district finals. In turn, the 1987-88 basketball season welcomed back its three returning varsity players, Robbie Mitchell, T. J. Brown, and David Hasselbach and their new players.

Contrary to the preceding year, the team consisted of a majority of underclassmen. Taking into account the lack of experience, it was to be a rebuilding year. Under the direction of Coach Doug Aplin the Varsity team began the season on firm footing and fired up. After only a month of practice, Aplin was asssured when he said, "The team works well together and is highlighted by quite a few outstanding players. They pull in to form both a strong defense and offense. While as a whole, the team may lack playing time and game experience, they have the raw talent there to lead them to a winning season and the experience will come along with it."

The players worked to ensure their stability and effectiveness as a team with hours of strenuous conditioning and hard training. Beginning in November, the team practiced drills and offensive and defensive tactics for two hours every day after school, and as a result they were ready to tackle the competition. This practice and effort paid off immediately at their first game of the season in their win over Jefferson. And it was this winning spirit and motivation which held them against longstanding rivals and the projected competition of the season — Gaither and Hillsborough.

As the season progressed,the team was also thrown by a major rule change. A three point jump shot had been voted in and installed last year for the entire state. For the Chiefs, this shot gave them their first win of the season. And although time was still needed for the team to get comfortable with the shot, Aplin foresaw it as a plus in their run for the district title.

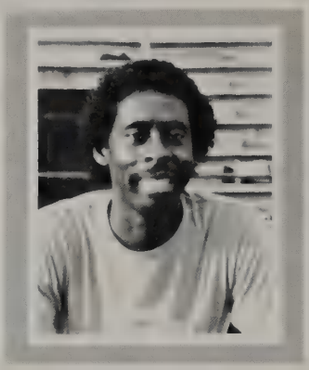
The J.V. Teams "Press" On



Franklin Brooks

Saturday was the day most students looked forward to as a day of relaxation and fun, yet for the Boys' Junior Varsity Basketball team, Saturday was another day of practice. Coach Frank Brooks took "each team individually", while planning different strategies every week. "The point I've tried to stress to the guys is to play DEFENSIVELY. That's our main ingredient," commented Coach Brooks. The team was comprised of mostly sophomores and a few juniors. Dribbling skills were perfected by sophomores Derik McClure, Chris Rule, and Jason Accardi. Contributing members Ricky Simmons, James White, and John Accardi polished the Boys' passing game. The Boys' inspiration stemmed from their tough competitors such as King, Hillsborough, and Gaither.

Coach Dave Rittenauer was busy with the Girls' J.V. Basketball team. Coach Rittenauer stressed the importance of good passing skills and shooting strategies. Starters Toni McIntire and Lori Robertson used their shooting skills effectively, while Patrice Beatle moved with quickness to guard and block opponents. Coach Dave Rittenauer, who worked with the girls every day after school, gave a short pep talk to his team before each game. He also enforced a good "press", which was concentrated defense on their opponents. Like the Boys' main defense strategy, the Girls' team also controlled the court with a well-practiced defense.

Like every year, the Junior Varsity teams had no returning players. Despite this disadvantage, both the Girls' and Boys' teams intensely prepared prior to their first game. Teamwork takes time to establish, but our Junior Varsity put on the "press", and quickly readied themselves for their upcoming opponents.

Kicking Into High Gear

Ms. Alicia Pelaez

A group of girls listened carefully as the announcement came over the intercom. "There will be a meeting on Tuesday in the gym for all girls interested in playing soccer." They started practicing early, in full anticipation of the upcoming season. Because the new players outnumbered the old players, Coach Alicia Pelaez wanted to get started ahead of time.

The team began to train four days a week from mid-September to mid-October. They faced the daily challenge of running laps, stadiums and sprints, and in addition the girls worked out in the weight room. The Lady Chiefs started early in order to be physically ready for the next phase of practice. This phase lasted from mid-October to the season's end, and involved the mastering of such skills as effective trapping, passing, shooting, and other game techniques. And it was here that Captains Valerie Wagner and Traci Anderson, along with the other Senior players, lent their assistance and advice to their new teammates.

All of their efforts culminated into the actual soccer season, and resulted in overall readiness for each challenge that came their way. This included two new opponents that came with the loss of two old adversaries. With the absence of Jefferson and Tampa Bay Tech teams, the Academy of Holy Names and Gainesville High stepped in as replacements.

It was finally game time, and the team warmed up together on the field. Each player prepared herself mentally while she stretched. The opening whistle blew, and as the starters ran out to the field, they began to feel the excitement . . . and the nervousness. After the initial kickoff, though, the nervousness soon faded away. And whether or not they were victorious, the Lady Chiefs always congratulated each other on a game well played, and a job well done.

Victory Abounds in New Attitudes

Coach Molina

Starting his second year as coach of the boys' soccer team, Mr. Santiago Molina was hopeful and confident that it would be better than the first.

Some people wondered if the graduation of some of the key players for the previous season would affect the team. That was not the case; instead, Coach Molina was much happier with his second year team because he believed they were more unified and played better as a team. Coach Molina stated, "There are no individual stars this year, and that helps our team play together as a whole team more so than teams with one or two outstanding players." The coaches primary goal was improvement upon the previous season's winning record which included eight wins. At the beginning of his second season, the team showed promise of meeting this goal by defeating four teams to win the King Key Club Invitational Soccer Tournament. The impressive show boosted the team's morale and prepared them for the season ahead.

To prepare for the season, the team held practices consisting of work on endurance and drills with the ball. The team increased their endurance with wind sprints and the twelve-minute run, and ball work consisted of scrimmages and shots on goal. Coach Molina was also pleased with the attitude of the returning seniors. He felt that he missed the support of the seniors during his first year, and that their support was essential to the success of the team. Other strong factors in the team's favor were the addition of several talented sophomores and the consistency of the returning juniors. Coach Molina believed that this was the year for his team.

Coach gets back in Swing of things

Coach Elaine Honig

After a ten-year lapse, Ms. Elaine Honig returned to the softball scene. During the late seventies Elaine Honig coached softball and volleyball, then took some time off. She was back in the swing of things this year, instructing a health awareness class and coaching softball once again. "It is great to be back, I missed the school and the atmosphere", said Coach Honig, who was enthusiastic about her return. "I enjoyed coaching softball, the girls were great", said Coach Honing as she expressed her feelings about the team's attitude towards having another coach. "Coach Honig was a breath of fresh air, she was a good coach and taught us to always try our hardest to win," said Susan Buttery, a star player of the softball team. The team itself went through transitions within the past few years the softball team has had several coaches, but now they have gotten on the right track with Coach Honig. "She worked us hard and made us sweat and it paid off" said Alicia Weigel, second baseman for the team. The girls kept a high morale and said, "By supporting each other we kept a positive attitude and we always play as a team". Team unity was essential. The team played, won and lost as a team. These were some of the words that brought the team closer and helped them work together better. Besides being unified, the girls' softball team must be prepared physically and mentally before game time. One of Coach Honig's objectives was to review basic skills before every game and insisted that each member of the team give it her all for the game. With all of this preparation in mind, the team anticipated stiff competition from traditional rivals Gaither and Leto and established a good foundation using their fundamental skills. Overall, with a new coach and excellent team morale, the girls of softball showed their best ability and had fun.

New field big hit with baseball team

Coach David Kent

On a cold day in January, tryouts for the 1988 Baseball team began. Sixty hopeful students fought to be one of the final thirty to make the squad. Coach David Kent headed up the coaching staff for the baseball team and he was very optimistic about his players. "We've got a great team. I think it will show," commented Coach Kent. Having a "great team" didn't just happen.

Every member of the team was expected to be at all practices, which were many! "We held practice everyday, Monday through Friday, for two hours. We did a lot of running and a lot of hitting," said Junior David Hutcheson.

1988 was David Hutcheson's second year pitching for the Chiefs and he matched up well in their first game of the season against the number one pitcher in the state.

Sophomore Jimmy Reggio also enjoyed some game time on the mound, one of the few sophomores to take the field. "The sophomores on the team were chosen mostly for their talent," remarked Coach Nelson Valdez. "They don't get to play much because we have so many juniors and seniors that are playing for Chamberlain a second and third year." Regardless of class status, Coach Kent encouraged his players to develop their own technique. "He guides us in what we do, but when it comes time to bat, we have to do what is natural," commented Senior third baseman Timmy Leto.

The team enjoyed a new luxury this year – home games at Chamberlain! The Administration put fifteen-hundred dollars into renovating the field. "We got new clay, a fence in left field and a sprinkler system," reported short-stop Jimmy Savage.

With Captains Rob Hines and Doug Joseph heading up the squad, the Chiefs had a successful season. The careful guidance of Coaches Kent, Valdez, Fungo and Parker, made the Chamberlain team number one!

Tennis: A Love-Able Sport!

Ms. Chernoff and Mr. Fleming

It's five o'clock on a chilly February afternoon. The score is thirty-love. The opponents face each other in a battle of concentration and physical ability. No, this isn't Wimbledon—it's tennis practice at Rowlette Park for the boys' and girls' tennis teams. Contrary to popular belief, tennis can be a grueling and strenuous sport. And though it can be trying, members of the tennis team took their game with the utmost seriousness and channeled all of their efforts in an attempt to make themselves one of Tampa's best teams. Long and tedious hours of practice prepared the teams for their season and allowed them to finish the year with a commendable record.

The girls' team was complimented due to the efforts of players such as Senior Le Thi Bach Uyen and Junior Donna Reefe who were returning players. The team's strong foundation coupled with a practice, composed of stretches, laps, and sprints, three times a week allowed them to do well. The girls had difficult matches with the Gaither and Leto teams and under the leadership of Ms. Karen Chernoff proved that they were among the best teams in the county.

Coach Fleming, in his second consecutive season as the boys' tennis coach instilled in the group a great feeling of unity. By running sprints with the team and by participating in other aspects of the training, Mr. Fleming was able to gain his team's trust and respect. Billy Shea and Ajay Arora were among the returning players who were instrumental to the team's success. With strenuous bi-weekly practices the boys were able to create a valuable and talented tennis team. Both the girls' and boys' tennis teams played their best!

Dedication & Depth Promise Success

Mr. George and Mr. Mariotti

Have you ever seen a toddler golfing? Probably not. The fact that most high school golfers come out inexperienced makes it hard to build a seasoned team. While the boys' team faced this problem, the girls' were lucky enough to start out the season a step ahead.

The most valuable addition to the girls' team was sophomore Kelly Daniel. Not only had Kelly had previous golfing experience, she had already made a name for herself by being named a Junior All-American by Golf Magazine.

Kelly, along with strong returners Tina Bohannon and Lori Ballard, made it possible for the team to be well-prepared as they attempted to defend their District title against such challengers as King and Brandon. Coach Dave Mariotti thought that it was the girls' "belief in themselves that made the difference" in their playing.

The boys' team headed by Coach Frank George began the season rebuilding and making up for the previous year's losses. Seniors Lawrence Hahn and Gregg Rosa laid the groundwork as the team strove to build their skills. During the two most important tournaments — the Western Conference Championship at Diamond Hills in Valrico and the District Championship in Temple Terrace — the boys vied for one of the top three spots against competitors such as Brandon, King, Jesuit, and Jefferson. Coach George's major goal was to surprise them at both Districts and Western Conference. The team's dedication toward this goal was shown by their hard work: practicing every day after school and even on Saturdays. Coach George stated, "The boys will be hitting golf balls till they are blue in the face." But all the commitment was just par for the course!

Striding With Enthusiasm

Ms. Angela Butler

When it comes to running track, nobody said it would be easy. Naomi Morris of the girls' track team agreed, saying, "It is tough, but if it is something that you want to do, go for it." That kind of enthusiasm kept the girls going through the daily rigors of practice and an equally rigorous season. Coach Angela Butler, a new face at the head of the team, hoped the enthusiasm would "last through the rough times."

At practice, the girls did specific drills to prepare them for the events that they would participate in. Hurdlers, sprinters, long-distance runners, jumpers, and discus throwers had different types of work-outs for their event. Every day, the girls committed themselves to preparing for the track season, which began in March.

The Lady Chiefs Track Team members remained dedicated to all that they did throughout the season. It was not easy, but the girls pushed themselves a little bit further than that at times in the hopes of having a successful season. They began to realize early on how much they had to give of themselves in order to be ready. Morris commented, "It takes a lot of effort to be on the track team. You have to have a positive attitude."

Despite being a young team, several members were expected to have a good season. Cathy McCormack made a strong showing in the 440, and Christianna Rininger served as the backbone of the long distance runners. Sprinters such as Janel Stevens and Naomi Morris also proved to be valuable members of the team.

Dedication and enthusiasm, mixed with a feeling of competitiveness kept the girls on the right track. Junior Tonya Davis summed up this feeling when she stated, "It takes a very willing, competitive attitude to run a very successful season in track. Most of all it's the teammates that promote that attitude."

Running to Set New Records

Coach Franklin Brooks

With high expectations for a competitive season, Boys' Track jumped to set new records. The Boys' Track Team consisted of seventy-nine members. This large number of athletes allowed Coach Franklin Brooks to specialize the boys in certain areas such as sprints, shot-put, high jump, middle or long distance. With the assistance of Coach Doug Stone, Coach Julius Shine, and Coach Robert Lucci, Coach Brooks was able to give each boy specific training in his event.

Practicing for about two hours every day enabled each team member to improve or perfect his skills. Practice started with group warm-ups which were followed by a high volume workout. Before a meet this workout became more intense. In addition, each boy prepared for a meet with hard work and dedication, but team effort was also necessary to have a victorious season. "In track you strive to be the best in your own event, but you're also working for the team at the same time," commented senior Fran Flores.

The strategies used by the coaches for Boys' Track depended upon which team they were competing against. Sprints and distances were the strong points of Boys' Track. However, middle distance, such as the 440 and 880, was an area in which improvement was needed.

For each meet forty-five team members were chosen. This was based upon which event needed the strongest boy according to the opponent. The outstanding individuals of Boys' Track included mostly returning members. Among these were Malcolm Manning, Eric Hunt, Richard Short, Bobby Gladsen, Chris Foster, Justin Luke, and Richard Marsh. Boys' Track also gained strength with newcomer Gary Thompsin. "With such a large volume of athletes, I'm looking forward to hopefully keeping our undefeated record and winning State," commented Coach Brooks.

New buildings, such as the Tampa Bay Performing Arts Center, enhance our skyline as well as our cultural awareness.

The Constitution of the United States, through 200 years of revisions and amendments, still remains the firm foundation of our country.

Constructive Change Builds Character

Changes occur in the world around us every day which are accompanied by growth and expansion, both physical and mental. Cities, as well as people, grow and mature as time goes by. Everywhere you look, improvements and revisions are being made: new buildings are popping up, old buildings are being restored, roads are being widened, and cities are expanding their horizons, literally and figuratively. This construction, while demonstrating physical growth, is also symbolic of our changing thoughts and attitudes. We continue to find innovative solutions to our problems through creativity and compromise, as well as come up with new ideas for the improvement and expansion of our community.

New faces in familiar places

Some came to stay, some were just passing through, some like the band U-2, just came to rock the Bay. A party of new faces visited both sides of the Bay, from the Guardian Angels of New York to the Pandas of China. The nationally-famous crime-fighters, the Guardian Angels, came to Tampa in early 1988 to help apprehend the Suitcase City Rapist. While they were here, they sponsored a march on Sulfur Springs to demonstrate against "crack" pushers and hoped to establish a Tampa chapter of the Guardian Angels. The Florida Suncoast Dome was another new face to the community. St. Petersburg started building the multi-million dollar stadium in hopes of getting a baseball team. Soon after construction began, though, toxic waste was found on the site, and construction halted.

Tampa Stadium heated up when U-2 performed on their "Joshua Tree" tour. This new group from Ireland rapidly became one of the most popular bands in the U.S. Their concert in Tampa, which sold out in a matter of hours, had the second highest attendance of any other concert in America in 1987. Probably the most exotic faces in Tampa were the giant pandas Ling-Ling and Yong-Yong. Busch Gardens built a million-dollar complex to accommodate these rare critters. As kids and grown-ups fell in love with the bears, "Pandamonium" hit the Bay full force.

Six Period Day Scratched

With the election of Betty Castor as Commissioner of Education and the introduction of the lottery, a new light was shed on education in the community. The educational spectrum culminated at the Hillsborough County School Board "Rap Session". At this meeting, four to six delegates from each of the fourteen schools in the county expressed their likes and dislikes concerning the current school system. Among the major issues was an earlier decision made by the School Board which changed the school day from seven periods to six periods. After an overwhelming negative response from teachers, parents, and students, the board rescinded the decision to reconsider the seven-period day. Following the rap session, the board voted to keep the seven-period day, facing a five million dollar deficit in the budget. These strains being placed on the budget were to be alleviated by the lottery. But recently a controversy arose as to how much money was actually going towards education. Other issues addressed at the rap session included the number of allowed club fundraisers and the shortage of guidance counselors, reflected by problems in scheduling. No definite decision was made on these issues, but the board planned to consider all of them.

Pope Visits America

On his second visit to the United States, Pope John Paul II arrived at Miami International Airport on September 10, to begin a ten day, nine city tour of the U.S. Although the temperature was a scorching ninety-five degrees, President and Nancy Reagan and an invitation—only crowd of 750 dignitaries and selected parishioners greeted the Pope upon his arrival. The Pope conducted mass before one thousand priests from the area at St. Mary's Cathedral, and then met with President Reagan at Vizcaya, where the two discussed arms control and efforts to achieve world peace.

Concluding his two-day stay in Miami, Pope John Paul II was honored by a crowd of thousands of American enthusiasts at a parade down Biscayne Boulevard. The Pope then travelled on to eight other U.S. cities, ending his ten day tour in Detroit, Michigan.

Leaving a message for the citizens of America to "implore God to inspire Americans to share their wealth and constitutional liberties with the world's less fortunate," Pope John Paul II completed another successful mission for peace.

A New Game In Town

"Florida is the winner!" In spite of some conflicting viewpoints, this promotional theme was heard throughout the state as Florida prepared for the opening of its new lottery.

The Florida Lottery, organized by the new Lottery Department, was designed to be a means of raising much-needed money for education. Tickets went on sale January 12 at supermarkets, pharmacies, gas stations, and convenience stores throughout the state, and, for one dollar, anyone aged eighteen or older could try his luck at winning one of the prizes ranging from a free lottery ticket to lower prize amounts of up to five thousand dollars to the grand prize of one million dollars.

Lottery officials intended for the lottery to provide entertainment and fur but not everyone was amused, even b the good intentions. Established as method of raising money for public edu cation, the lottery proceeds, after sub tracting costs of prizes and administra tion, amounted to 35 percent of the tota money raised by the ticket sales. Educa tion officials, including the Commissione of Education Betty Castor, were dis pleased with the amount, calculating tha it would only provide enough funds to ru the state's schools for one week.

Despite the controversy, the Florida Lottery opened with great success an Florida joined the twenty-nine othe states in the U.S. having their own state run lotteries.

Keeping bright students in state was a goal of programs like FAS.

No more easy figuring per dollar.

After the controversial services tax was repealed, the state raised the sales tax from 5% to 6% to raise necessary funds. The tax went into effect on February 1, 1988. It affects many products; although groceries, medicine, and other necessities remain exempt.

However, the decision to change from services to sales tax has caused some arguments. The sales tax increase is expected to bring $1.25 billion to the state treasury. But the services tax would have been even more prosperous for the state. The sale tax also takes more money from the middle and lower classes while the services tax would have drawn more from the upper class. The average family has to pay about $170 a year under the new sales tax. The extra money will be used to fix prisons, roads, and sewers.

Senate President John Vogt said, "I expect there will be some unhappy people". But despite the discussion, the tax is now 6% — no more easy figuring to the dollar.

Florida fights for the brightest

And you thought it was a hard process applying to universities! Did you ever consider what recruiters must do to get the brightest students to attend their universities? From letters, to phone calls, to personal visits, recruiters have a difficult job. However, recruiters in the state of Florida don't seem to be doing their job well enough. Florida is currently suffering from a "brain drain" which is severely hurting the state's universities. Most of the top scholars in the state are attending northern universities.

Officials are aware of the problem and have started several programs to combat it. The state is giving between $3-5 million to the universities for scholarships and stronger honors programs. The Florida Academic Scholars program is open to students who score 1100 on the SAT and have a 3.0 GPA, and provides as much as $2500 a year to students who stay in state. Wendy Chung, who attended high school in Florida, was sent letters, and even received a dozen roses from the Chancellor of the public university system of Florida after she won a science competition. She chose Cornell because it has "a better academic reputation". She said, however, that, "the honors program at UF is actually as good as Cornell but not enough people know about it".

The state is trying to get better publicity and they seem to be having some luck. 87% of college-bound students are staying in state. Harvard's dean of admissions said, "over the next several years competition for students will be intense".

Political scandal stains campaigns

As the Iran-Contra affair drifted from the public eye, political scandals among many politicians, including some candidates of the '88 presidential election, seemed to fill in the gap. Oliver North, the "mute marine," told all he knew to the Iran-Contra investigation committee and was the highlight of the investigation to the viewing public. The probe did not, however, result in Reagan's impeachment or resignation, and slowly faded away from the media—until the '88 campaign. In a controversial interview, Dan Rather questioned presidential candidate George Bush on his play in the Iran-Contra affair. Bush subsequently established a simple fact; Iran-scan was a year old, and it was time to drop the subject.

Sometime between the beginning of the Iran-Contra investigation and the '88 primaries, democratic candidate Gary Hart gained popularity with his own affair—one with Donna Rice in the Caribbean. After he publicly apologized, Hart dropped from the presidential race only to jump back in when he realized that many other politicians were also imperfect. Public hype suddenly placed emphasis on the personal lives of many politicians, some of who admitted to having smoked marijuana in their earlier years.

Although the campaigns of '88 were marred by the public focus on candidates' personal lives, eventually such media hype dissolved and focus shifted to the political views and issues.

Storybook game for Redskins

While most of America watched on elevision, the Washington Redskins exploded in the second quarter of Superowl XXII and made the football world sit up and take notice. It seemed that the Redskins, led by former Tampa Bay Buc Doug Williams, set out to win the game, breaking all the records along the way. Washington now holds records for most ouchdowns, total yards, and points cored in a Superbowl.

Originally signed as Washington's backup quarterback, Williams led his eam to playoff victories which sent them o the Superbowl. With tooth surgery the lay before the game and an injured knee, he odds were against him. However, Williams, the first black quarterback to play n a Superbowl, beat the odds and drove is team to a 42-10 win over the Broncos. Williams, named MVP of the game, became one super hero of Superbowl XXII.

PTL plagued with problems

With Jim Bakker's resigination as President of the PTL Club, a series of scandals surfaced. The first brought to the public eye was Jessica Hahn's accusation that Bakker and two other high church officials made sexual advances toward her. Later, Jimmy Swaggart, who took over as President, found PTL's accounts in questionable order. The funds were then turned over to the IRS, who investigated for fraud.

After a long financial struggle, PTL, a huge organization owning a broadcasting network, theme park, and camp grounds, filed bankruptcy. Soon after, Swaggart also resigned, leaving the club under the direction of a council. Meanwhile, Jim Bakker and his wife Tammy preach their defense to former followers.

Bork Rejected!

In a widely publicized dispute, Robert H. Bork was denied a seat on the Supreme Court. Although Bork was appointed by President Ronald Reagan, the Senate overturned the president's decision by a majority vote. Commenting that a Supreme Court seat "would be an intellectual feast just to be there," Bork was seen as demonstrating a lack of compassion for victims of injustice. The statement resulted in an advertising campaign against Bork, who was portrayed as a jurist hoping to abrogate several Supreme Court decisions on civil rights and civil liberties. Although Bork felt he was "badly misrepresented," the conservative was "not angry" about the decision.

Out With the Old and Forget the New

November was a major turning point of the relations between the United States of America and the Soviet Union. The treaty between the United States and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics on the Elimination of Their Intermediate Range and Shorter Range Missiles was a drastic step in the reduction of nuclear arms between the two super-powers.

The treaty, concerned with intermediate and shorter range missiles, dealt mainly with the weapons located in or around the borders of Western Europe. The United States took out several sets of Pershing missiles along with the cruise missiles located in West Germany equipped with four warheads each. In turn, the Soviet Union eliminated large amounts of multi-warhead missiles from the Soviet-blocked countries bordering Western Europe. The treaty was met with mixed feelings from the people of the belligerent nations. A commonly asked question was, "Was the treaty signed for the right reasons?". Many citizens of both countries accused President Reagan and Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev of acting under the influence of irrelevant economic pressures. The treaty was also viewed as an attempt by Reagan to glorify his presidential term in its final months. The treaty also raised alarm among the bystanding nations of Europe because of the superior Soviet conventional army which was left uncountered. The overall feeling of the treaty however was one of relief. Most people saw it as the first step to a more peaceful coexistence between the United States and the Soviet Union. The treaty supplied needed security to both of the nations involved and to the rest of the world.

Redeeming Victory Brings Cup Home

Dennis Conner, the first U.S. helmsman to lose the cup in 1983, brought the America's Cup back home to the United States by defeating Australia's Kookaburra III. Conner, captain of The Stars and Stripes earned his chance at the cup by easily defeating New Zealand's Kiwi Magic. Advancing to the finals, Conner faced Kookaburra III. In this confrontation, the crew of The Stars and Stripes defeated the Australians in four straight races to recapture the America's Cup.

After regaining the cup, the American crew intended to keep it. To do this though, the Americans will probably have to adjust to a new boat design due to a judgment on the cup rules by the Supreme Court of New York which will allow the introduction of more boats capable of faster speeds and better maneuverability.

Mines discovered by the U.S. on the Iran Ajr.*

Ambush in the Gulf

In an effort to keep the Persian Gulf open to navigation, the United States began in July to escort vessels to protect them from Iran. On September 18, two American helicopters spotted the Iran Ajr 50 miles northeast of Bahrain pushing a mine over its side. Opening fire on the landing craft, the skirmish resulted in a victory for the United States over Iranian Fundamentalism. Several mines were confiscated intact to further incriminate the Iranians. The operation was a success in its timing and interservice cooperation involving Air Force spy planes, Navy ships, and an elite Army helicopter unit known as the "Night Stalkers." Also contributing to the success was Admiral William J. Crowe Jr. who was primarily responsible for reconstructing military bureaucracy and overcoming interservice rivalry.

Previously, the United States had encountered setbacks concerning the Middle East—especially, dealing with the tragedy of the USS Stark. But the Iran Ajr incident proved to be morale building. Not only did the Gulf ambush repair the breach in the area of interservice, but the mines seized could be used as a weapon in the larger political war.

While some feel that victories like these will send troops home soon, others feel that the United States' forces will remain in the Gulf as long as we have national interests at stake there. Nevertheless, the Iran Ajr incident displayed the strength of the U.S. in their combination of political imperatives with new technology and a reliable command structure.

Black Monday

The Dow Jones industrial stock average dropped 508 points, the largest in history, on Monday, October 19, 1987. Some called it a "crash," others called it a "meltdown," and others called it "Black Monday." Whatever it was, it stripped $500 billion from the market value of U.S. securities.

Immediately following the crash, investigators pursued and analyzed previous conditions that may have ignited the panic. Theories of cause revolved around the confusion that had arisen with the speculation in futures and options which serve as a means to hedge against stock losses. Faults and discrepancies were also found in the overload of computerized trading information and the inability of brokers and investors to keep up with the vast amounts of information.

As a result, reform was demanded. The battle between market regulation by the government or by brokers had begun.

you think we're going to be able to stand another year of this, Scott? I don't know!?
Well, I could babble and babble forever - you know me!? Just too much to say in so small a space! Don't be a stereotype! This just happens to be a quote-on-quote "normal" add! Gimme something to do now!
20 years from now, I wonder who'll be the most successful

Paula—

Well, it will soon be time to say goodbye, and each of us will take a giant step into our new, yet separate lives. There will be new faces to see, and new friendships to build. But never in my life will I find a friendship as strong as ours.

No matter how many miles apart we may be, I know someday our roads will cross again and our friendship can continue. But until that time comes, remember that I love you and I'll be thinking about you forever.

I love you "Pawla"

The story begins . . .

In the beginning, there was Chernoff, a creature never before experienced by any in the gifted program. Unknowingly, they flocked to History HG 316 where they were to embark on a three year mission, to survive the gifted program at CHS and to graduate with a decent GPA. June 7, 1988 the second generation has come and gone leaving them to shed the tales of their sophomore and junior years, with the final chapter yet to be written and the great scattering yet to occur .....

HOW WILL YOU PAY FOR COLLEGE?

This is a difficult question faced by parents and students in this country, With the rising costs of an education and the fast-paced highly technical society, the worth of any type of education beyond high school is necessary. BLAS Financial Network can help! We can unravel the secret of 3 billion dollars in scholarships, loans that go unclaimed each year. Now the student will be able to select school according to their quality and not their cost. For free information call 980-0494.

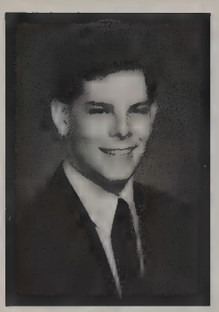
We love you and we're very proud of you! Dream your dreams, work hard to achieve them, and enjoy life along the way.
Love,
Mom and Dad

Rhonda,
Congratulations Babe—
You did good!!
I'm very proud of you.
Love you much.
Mom

Jodi,
"To understand the heart and mind of a person, look not at what he has already achieved, but at what he aspires to do."
Go for it W.W.!!
Love,
Mom and Dad

na,
e love you and are proud of you. We will always pport you in whatever you strive to do.
Love,
Mom and Dad

Wendy,
Thank you for being the special person you are. You have been a true blessing to each of us — always thoughtful and loving. May the Lord always direct your path. Prov. 3:5-6.
We love you,
Mom, Dad, and Jeff



Kenneth,
Congratulations on a job well done. We are all very proud of you.
Love, Mom, Dad,
Steven, Erin,
and Michael

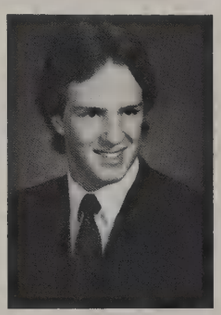
Mom, Dad, and Jennifer

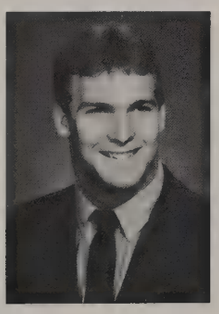


Dan, congratulations "BRAT". We love you, we are proud of you — you are a source of joy, happiness, energy, enthusiasm — a truly beautiful person. We wish you God's richest blessings always.
Mom, Dad, Lori,
and John

Congratulations Jill!
Much happiness and success in whatever you choose and may your future be filled with as much love and warmth as you have given.
Love you,
Mom and Dad

Amy,
We are tremendously proud of your accomplishments and who you are. You are bound for happiness and success. Our love and support are with you.
Mom, Dad, Jon,
Andy, Jake

Kim,
May your dreams be shaped by your hopes — not your hurts, and your future be as bright as the lives you've brightened.
We love you.
Mom, Susan,
Grandma and Grandpa



Congratulations, Scott!
You have always made us very proud of you. We hope that life brings you as much happiness as you have brought to us!
We love you.
Mom, Dad, and Michelle

Lisa
God bless everything you do. You have given us more love than any daughter could. We are so very proud.
Mr. and Mrs. J.O.
Relihan

Michael;
Roses are red,
Violets are blue,
Twelve down for us,
Four more for you.
Congratulations, Mike!
Mom, Dad, and Lisa

Jason: You're a terrific son (and a great swimmer!) You've proven that you can achieve whatever you strive for. Set your goals in life and your future success will be unlimited. We're so very proud of you!
Love, Mom and Dad

Renee,
As you take another step forward, always remember we are here to assist, and love you very much. Much success and happiness.
Mom, Dad,
David, Michelle

Julie,
You made it! We love you very much. Remember, we believe in you and your future — you can do anything!
Love,
Mom, Dad, and Brian

Natalie,
All your hard work paid off by graduating and making NHS. We love you and are so proud of you.
Love, Mom and Dad

Time for that diploma to be received; for one of your goals has been achieved. Keep your hopes high and dreams alive. You have our wishes and the Lord's on your side.

Dear Sue,
You are a joy! Your smile lights up the world, your compassion warms the earth, your humor makes everything sparkle!
Love,
Mother, Dad and Andy

Congratulations Scott
You're all that we co
ask for in a son. We
. . . and always will
very proud of you!
love you very much!

To Jon, a son we've always been proud of. Congratulations on a job well done. Keep your tender heart and your "Alf Attitude." You'll have "No Problems."

Love, Mom & Dad

Well Brownie II, you made it! So on to BYU. Life is full of good things for you, and you're just the one to make the most of it. We love watching you enjoy life. We love you,

Mom and Dad

It seems like only yesterday you were three, and held an aspirin to your stiff neck instead of swallowing it. You may never be a physician, but whatever direction you choose, we know you will succeed.

Love, Mom and Dad

The young man you are today makes us very proud in every way. Joy and happiness to us you have brought. Always carry with you our loving thoughts.

Mama and Daddy

Alicia, Congratulations! Knowing your competitive drive and expectations, your future is filled with accomplished dreams. We wish you love and happiness as you have always given us!

Love, Mom, Dad, & Aaron

Payton, Your bubbly personality has always brought joy and happiness to our family. We have been proud of you since the day you were born, and will always be here for you wherever life may take you.

Love, Mom, Dad, & Tracey

Alex,
We hope you feel as proud as we are and that, as you start a new chapter in your young life, you will be as happy as we wish you to be.

Love, Mom, Dad and Steve

Homes are built on the foundation of wisdom and love. Where these reside, the rooms are furnished with valuable, beautiful things. You, daughter, have filled our home with these things.

Love, Mom and Dad

Tessy Joy White
Tessy, Congratulations! We love you, and thank you for being you! We are so proud of all of your accomplishments now and always!

Love, Mom, Ted, Dad, Marilee, and Stephanie

Dad and I, Lisa and Mischief send our congratulations to you. Words from the finest AP WEP written could not describe our love for you.

Wendy Williamson — We are proud of you! Your talents & beauty are gifts from God & with God as your agent happiness & success is yours. Keep:
ATTITUDE — POSITIVE
IDEALS — HIGH
ENTHUSIASM — BUBBLY

We would like to take this opportunity to thank the following people:
Susan Moore and Eddie O'Casio from Bryn-Alan and the rest of the Bryn-Alan staff, Mrs. Sylvia Sarrett and the rest of the English department for their help and dedication throughout underclass and club pictures, and Marc Paolo for "THE WEP".

Jizz,
I'm so glad we met and became friends this year. Dance has been a blast - all at least it was for! Anyways hope next year is just as fun and even better - I know I'm gonna. Party! Have a rockin' summer!
Ttl ya
Next year,
Michelle

To our multi-faceted TOTEM staff:

Face it, you guys, we faced some major difficulties this year! But somehow we managed to pull through. Remember when we found out we had no JV football pictures the day after their last game; and all of those ever-so important Betty Castor pictures that came back — BLANK! And all the other memories: the end of our private lunch-room . . . the disappearance of FBLA . . . Folio? What's that? Where do you put one? (gosh, you guys never figured it out, did you?) . . . interviews were due yesterday? . . . forbidden food days we ended up having anyway . . . the "features guys" — what a crew!! . . . the eternally empty Sparkler buckets . . . we know you really hated it, Dave, but you all looked really sharp in your red and white . . . the junior X episode . . . last second journeys to Bryn Alan (or Brian Alan, whatever you want to call it) . . . editorializing — we would never do that . . . just what is "D-14" . . . banana hunts at Delmar . . . our eight free pages of spot color — what a contest team . . . living, breathing and sleeping face spin-offs . . . NEVER LOSE YOUR PMA!!

We ♡ U! Beth & Melissa

Time Flies When You're Having Fun!

Remember in elementary school when the years seemed to blend together and last an eternity? Now that we're approaching the completion of our required education, each year is becoming increasingly more unique. Unfortunately, these special times occur when the years seem to pass much more quickly. One minute we're being introduced to the rigors of high school life at sophomore orientation. The next minute we're proudly receiving our diplomas at graduation. The years between orientation and graduation are some of the most formative years of our lives.

The main purpose of high school is to teach us academically, but in the process we learn such valuable lessons as communication, cooperation and dedication, thus becoming a truly well-rounded person.

To enhance our multifaceted personalities, we acquired many lasting friendships. These friendships provided companionship and camaraderie as well as a valuable lesson. We learned that to have a friend, we must first be a friend. Relationships based on this philosophy are rewarding and enduring.

To top it all off, we had fun! We enjoyed ourselves at sports events, dances, parties and even at school.

Performing their morning duty for the student body, Ronda Mercer, Michele Cimino and Kim Brown prepare the morning announcements.

Above and beyond the call of duty, Vinh Do prepares Amir Dabiri for his upcoming nine weeks test in Trigonometry.

Jess,
Well atleast your not a sophomore any more. You are very sweet and soo nice. See ya next year and lots over the summer
love
Craig

With care, Amy Fleck adds the finishing touches to her car for the Homecoming Parade.

Graduation-the culmination of twelve long years of hard work and a reward greatly deserved.

Stay Tuned . . .

The good times don't end with the last day of school. For some it's merely a two and a half month reprieve from the hectic schedule of classes. For others, it's the end of their high school career as well as the first major step toward the future. For all, it is a future filled with good times, and some not so good. We are capable of dealing with these hard times because we've acquired a solid foundation of support and friendship.

"Let the good times roll!" That is the motto we live by in high school, but for seniors, it certainly doesn't end there. Whether our lives lead us to college, jobs, or anything else, we always take our fun-loving spirit with us confident that the new juniors and seniors will faithfully uphold the tradition.

Providing a useful service to her fellow student, Brenda Fusco styles Cathy Kasper's hair.*

Liz, You are a sweet person and an excellent dancer. Good luck in everything you do. I hope to see ya soon! Love Ya, Thank God French II is over! Amber
